Robert F. Goheen, Innovative University President, Dies at 88

Robert F. Goheen, the Princeton University president who ushered the University through coeducation, encouraged an increase in minority faculty members, and worked to increase community ties by spending several years of his retirement examining town-gown transformation on and off campus, died Monday at the University Medical Center at Princeton. He was 88.

The cause was heart failure, according to a University statement.

Mr. Goheen was an assistant professor of classics when, at age 37, he was selected to become Princeton's 16th president, and the youngest since the Revolutionary War. During his tenure, in addition to enrolling women, increasing its ethnic and racial diversity, and coping with protests against the war in Vietnam, the University expanded its commitment to research; its annual budget quadrupled; alumni contributions more than doubled; and 25 new buildings were constructed on the main campus. "With the passage of time, it becomes more and more clear that Bob Goheen was one of the great presidents in Princeton history," said Shirley M. Tilghman, Princeton's president since 2001.

After retiring from the presidency, he left the University to serve in a number of positions, including president of the Council on Foundations and ambassador to India. He returned to Princeton in 1981 as a senior fellow in public and international affairs in the Woodrow Wilson School and continued to be an active member of the University and local community, most notably as a co-founder of Princeton Future, a community-based organization that examines social, economic, and developmental aspects of town growth. In a letter to Mr. Goheen's widow, Margaret Goheen, the Princeton Future Council acknowledged her husband's work on and off campus. "Bob cared deeply about the community. He made the most singular contribution to the founding of this organization: he went over every word, every comma of our founding statement. He ensured honesty and humility without sacrificing the need to be progressive and definite. He spoke out forcefully in public on what is right," the letter read.

Sheldon Sturges, Princeton Future managing director, called him "a real fighter for social justice."

Towns Examine '08 PRS Budget

The Princeton Regional School district's proposed $57 million tax levy for the 2008-2009 academic year fell under the municipal magnifying glass Monday night as the Princeton Borough and Princeton Township governing bodies examined the schools' budget that proposes a 3.32 percent increase, slated for an April 15 vote.

Still feeling the effects of the public defeat of the PRS budget in 2007, Superintendent Judith Wilson sought to receive informal approval from the two governments, as both Borough Council and Township Committee are grappling with putting forth budgets that fall under the state-mandated four-percent cap on the tax levy.

Organized as an information session, the hearing focused on the tax levy disparity between the Borough and Township. That levy, based on property value, will translate into an increase of $332 per year for the average Borough homeowner with a property valued at $349,000, or an increase of nine cents to $1.965 for every $100 of assessed property value, and a $45 decrease per year for the average Township homeowner, with a property valued at $431,000 — a one-cent decrease to $1.6997 for every $100 of assessed property value.

Those figures, Ms. Wilson said, do not reflect the school levy or how the budget is constructed. The levies are based on a formula that factors housing sales in the Borough and Township between October 2006 and October 2007. Houses sold in the Borough during that time span held more closely than they did in the Township, Ms. Wilson said. The formula is also based on municipal rateables, she added.

The proposed $56,965,650 tax levy is added to other fund balances, tuition expenses, state aid, and charter school aid, resulting in a $72.5 million operating budget for the upcoming school year.

Ms. Wilson, in crafting the budget, said the Board of Education's goals included maintaining academic levels, offsetting increases in state-mandated expenses with efficiencies and reductions, lowering class size in core academic courses at Princeton High School, and reducing costs of Pre-K education.

A reduction in some support staff positions toward the addition of what would count as 2.4 faculty positions is also proposed.

To anticipate the state's mandate for all New Jersey school districts to provide Pre-K services for 3- and 4-year-olds with economic needs starting in the 2009-2010

Wilkes Gets Nod From Borough Democrats; Miller, Nemeth Slated for Primary Ballot

Kevin Wilkes, the Maclean Street resident whose last shot at Borough Council was curtailed because he did not meet the Borough's one-year residency requirements for holding office, appears to be headed for the dais at Borough Hall, having received a nod from Borough Democrats.

Mr. Wilkes, 50, will likely fill the vacancy on Borough Council created by former Councilman Wendy Benchley's March 24 resignation, and is the chosen Democratic candidate for the general election in November.

The Princeton Borough Democratic Committee met Sunday night to endorse Mr. Wilkes, who will be "highly recommended" to fill the Benchley vacancy, said Andrew Koontz, a

Poems in Eight Languages Highlight "Voices" Program

Area poets will read poems in eight languages, followed by their English translations, at Princeton Public Library on Thursday, April 10 at 7 p.m., when the library hosts the latest edition of its Voices Multilingual Poetry Night.

Featured poets that evening include Ruxanda Amarie (Romanian), Linda Arntzenius (Scotts), Efe Balıkcıoglu (Turkish), Rick Black (Hebrew), Vasiliki Katsarou (Modern Greek), Ludmilla Popova-Wightman (Bulgarian), Christopher Speakman (Czech), and Erika Wagner (French).

The poems will be projected in their native languages and in English on a screen in the Community Room. Since its debut in June 2005, the Voices program, organized by poet Carlos Hernández Peña, has become a staple of library programming.

All Princeton Public Library programs are free and open to the public. The physically challenged should contact the library at (609) 924-9529 48 hours before any program with questions about special accommodations.

The library is in the Sands Library Building at 65 Witherspoon St. in Princeton Borough. Convenient parking is available on neighboring streets and in the borough-operated Spring Street Garage, which is adjacent to the library. For more information about library programs and services, call (609) 924-9529 or visit www.princetonlibrary.org.

CORRECTION

A March 25, 2008 feature, "From 'Romeo and Juliet' to Real Estate, the Road Leads to Karl Light Boulevard," incorrectly indicated that Mr. Light, the retiring principal at K.M. Light Real Estate, the managing agent for property holdings of Princeton Community Housing, had moved to Princeton in 1950 with his wife, Lucy James. Ms. James is, in fact, Mr. Light's second, and current, wife. In 1950, Mr. Light moved from Trenton to Princeton with his first wife, Pat Light. The two had five children and divorced in 1980. (MH)

Topics In Brief A Community Bulletin

Approximately $2.4 million in outstanding payments between Princeton Borough and Princeton Township, stemming from old joint municipal capital projects, are finally beginning to be reconciled, said Borough Administrator Robert Bruschi last Tuesday. Princeton Township owes the Borough roughly $1.8 million, and the Borough owes the Township about $600,000, resulting in a $1.2 million net gain for the Borough, which will be used to pad the municipal surplus needed for future budgets or capital projects, Mr. Bruschi said. The payments stemmed from "dozens" of capital projects that were tracked using manual bookkeeping dating back to the 1990s. Mr. Bruschi said that digital billing as well as an open line of communication between Borough CFO Sandra Webb and Township CFO Kathryn Monzo has remedied the situation. "We'll have the whole thing behind us in a couple of weeks," Mr. Bruschi said. "Nobody's debating that everybody owes everybody money; it's just making sure that everybody has the appropriate backup so that when we get audited, we can tie it back to these projects." The reconciliation, Mr. Bruschi said, is the result of a two-year process during which both municipalities were getting their books in order, but he conceded that the towns "should have done a better job in keeping current with the billing." (MH)

The public is invited to attend the Princeton Regional Schools Candidates Night on Tuesday, April 8, from 8 to 9:30 p.m., in the John Witherspoon School Library. Sponsored by the Special Education PTO, the event will be an opportunity to meet current board member Walter Bliss, who, along with Daniel Haughton and Naomi Perlman, will be vying for one of two Township seats on the board in the coming April 15 election. Timothy Quinn of the Borough, who is running unopposed for the seat being vacated by Michael Mostoller, will also be on hand. (EG)

Corner House Counseling Center is currently recruiting members for the 2008-09 Teen Advisory Group, or TAG, which is a peer educator/leadership program that trains 11th grade students from Princeton area high schools in substance abuse awareness and prevention issues. TAG students meet weekly to learn about substance abuse and related issues and then develop presentations and workshops for students in grades 5-9 and for parents. Students are selected from each of the four Princeton high schools: Princeton High School, Princeton Day School, the Hun School, and Stuart Country Day School. "We strive to have a balanced group of 22 students, diverse in many ways, including ethnicity, gender, ideas and beliefs, and past experiences," said Gary DiBlasio, Corner House executive director. Students who are currently in their sophomore year from one of the Princeton area high schools can apply to be part of TAG. Applications are available at Corner House or the schools and are due on April 18. For more information, call Corner House at (609) 924-8018.

AN EYE ON THE FUTURE: Princeton Future hosted a discussion Saturday at the Princeton Public Library that focused largely on the prospect of municipal consolidation and the role of Princeton University in the greater community. There were, however, bread and butter issues like retail diversity and growth downtown that played a prominent role in the four-hour event. Contemplating the future are, clockwise from top left: Princeton University Vice President and Secretary Robert Durkee; Princeton Township residents Bill and Pam Wakefield; former Borough Mayor Marvin Reed; and Princeton Future Council Chair Robert Geddes.

Consolidation, Town-Gown Relations, Dominate Saturday Morning Discussion

If you listened carefully to the wants of roughly 100
Princeton residents who showed up on a Saturday morning at the Princeton Public Library, here's what you might have found: they want one Princeton, not two; they want a downtown that is small-business-friendly; they want growth, but not too much, or none at all; they want/don't want Princeton University; they want a place in town to buy their underwear.

ern relocation of the Dinky station, said Kevin Wilkes, a member of the Princeton Future council. "The University's request to relocate the Dinky station approximately 400 feet south from its existing location would need to be evaluated," Mr. Wilkes

TOPICS Of the Town

Residents did not hold back Saturday morning at the library, as Princeton Future, a community-based organization that focuses on in-town issues, sought to start a discussion on housing, economy, town-gown relations, diversity, and sustainability. In four hours, much was discussed, little was resolved, but that result, said organizers, was by design.

Likening the discussion process to a "three-act play," Robert Geddes, a former dean of the Princeton University School of Architecture and current chair of the Princeton Future council, said looking deep into the future of the community would require "creative plans."

After pointing to the recently-released, 180-page Princeton University campus plan that examines growth of the 380-acre campus over its 250-year evolution while eyeing an immediate track toward the campus of 2016, Mr. Geddes compared it to the Princeton Community Master Plan, the municipal document that outlines long-term community philosophies and goals; his point was that the two should work in tandem.

In that regard, the impact of the University's proposed Arts and Transit Neighborhood near University Place would represent something of a linchpin in the tie between institutional and municipal planning. The PU arts neighborhood plan, which includes significant changes to the area's infrastructure, including a 460-foot south-said, quoting the Princeton Community Master Plan, and adding that Princeton Future's aim is to "organize and focus the discussion on these topics."

Princeton University Vice President and Secretary Robert Durkee, representing the PU campus plan Saturday morning, said that working with municipal government, such as PU-financed construction of affordable housing units on Leigh Avenue, and keeping graduate housing on the tax rolls, were pivotal in holistic community planning.

Some residents, however, contended that the financial contributions of the University, the largest employer in the Princetons, were not enough. In FY2007, PU paid $3.7 million and $4.4 million to Princeton Borough and Township, respectively, in local taxes, and paid roughly $1 million to the Borough and $9,000 to the Township in voluntary contributions during that time. Those contributions, some residents have contended, need to increase.

But Mr. Durkee pointed to the school's contributions "beyond annual dollars," citing the covering of the cost of the soon-to-be-launched Princeton Borough jitney through the fall, financial contributions to the planned skate park in Princeton Township, and toward other community projects. He did not close the door on the possibility of increased contributions in the future: "We have increased our annual contribution and it increases every year. We are prepared to have conversations on financial contributions."

Anne Neumann, a Borough resident and a longtime critic of the University's voluntary gifts, said that the school should appropriate a portion of its $15.8 billion endowment for community contributions. In the past Ms. Neumann has also called for the University to keep all its properties on the tax rolls, bucking the national standard for non-profit, tax-exempt, academic institutions.

Mr. Geddes, however, refuted Ms. Neumann's assertion, calling for a "new mind-set" in the town-gown approach. "It would be a remarkable result of this meeting if, in fact, we left with a sense of openness," Mr. Geddes said.

A majority of those in attendance also supported the possibilities of municipal consolidation between the Borough and Township — a prospect that has been rejected each time it was up for a referendum. If consolidation does come up for a revote, however, there should be careful consideration on shared services, said Marvin Reed, chairman of the Master Plan Subcommittee of the Regional Planning Board of Princeton, as well as a member of the state's consolidation commission that examines municipal mergers and shared services.

"If there's renewed interest in town, we should look into [consolidation]," Mr. Reed said. "But you have to look at it as a merger, not as a hostile takeover," he said, adding that districts would be established as a means of preserving neighborhood character throughout what is now the Borough and Township.

Princeton Future will hold a second meeting on April 19 at 9 a.m. at the Princeton Public Library's Community Room to continue its town-wide discussion, this time focusing on sustainability, diversity, and process.

Mary S. Kurcinka
Chapin Talk to Focus on Children and Sleep

Sleepless in America author Mary Sheedy Kurcinka will speak on April 8, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. in the Thomas Auditorium at the Chapin School. The talk, which is free and open to the public, is sponsored by CommonGround, the parent association of Princeton area independent schools.

We are fast becoming a nation of "tired and wired" children and adults, said Ms. Kurcinka, whose other books include Raising Your Spirited Child, and Kids, Parents and Power Struggles. Citing findings showing that over 60 per cent of American children from infants to teens "are too exhausted to behave well and too tense to get to sleep," she believes that "our children's health and development are suffering, as is our society."

Ms. Kurcinka will discuss how to recognize if your child is getting enough sleep, and the "everyday decisions that innocently disrupt your child's sleep." She will also provide suggestions and examples that may help children and their families improve their sleep patterns.

Interested parents are also invited to a "CommonGround Conversation" in the dining pavilion at Chapin on Friday, April 11, at 8 a.m. For more information, contact Eileen Mannix at man nix@verizon.net, or visit the CommonGround website at www.princetoncommon ground.org.

Despite An Economic 'Storm' Brewing, Business Leaders Look for Bright Spots

The Mercer County business community was offered a sobering assessment of the county- and state-wide business climate last week: all forecasts are calling for recession, job growth is weak, home prices are tumbling, and there's a sense of fear on the street.

None of this news surprised anyone gathered at the third annual Mercer County Economic Summit Thursday at the Mercer County Community College Conference Center, as roughly 250 business owners, state and local government officials, and community leaders gathered to discuss the conference theme of businesses relocating to or expanding in Mercer County.

Weaker consumption numbers, caused by a myriad of market forces, including a fall in home prices, the weakest housing market since the Great Depression, and overhang in supply, shallow rates of construction, the subprime mortgage crisis, winding down job growth, and investors losing money in the stock market, all have business owners worrying. But as has been the case in other economic downturns, elected officials and financial experts remained positioned to look at the long term.

"I'm not going to give the doom and gloom discussion," said Gov. Jon S. Corzine, who made introductory remarks. "We do have challenges in this state, but we also have a very bright future." Mr. Corzine pointed to the county's five higher education institutions, calling the "leveragability" of the research conducted here "the envy of the world."

The governor called for the alignment of municipal operating budgets that carry the proper debt load, and called on the Legislature to address the practice of "home rule" and to urge towns to provide shared municipal services "in an efficient manner." Mr. Corzine, however, did acknowledge what he termed as "deeply disturbing issues" in regard to the housing industry.

Keynote speaker Robert Dye, vice president and senior economist with PNC Financial Services Group, pointed to an economic down cycle and recession forecasts that now hover toward 60 percent. Technically, two quarters of declining GDP equate a recession. A few months ago, the possibility of recession was slight, Mr. Dye said, but now it's a "fairly strong likelihood."

"All stats are pointing on one direction," he said, though adding that the Federal Reserve had taken an "activist" role, by reducing interest rates, putting stimulus in the pipeline.

Mr. Dye said this downturn is not as severe as that of the early 1990s: "We haven't seen that slide over the cliff like we did in '90-'91. Hopefully we'll avoid that kind of recession."

A 63,000 loss in jobs nationwide and zero-growth in payroll employment statewide will be reflected in local economic statistics, Mr. Dye said, adding that job loss is often a "lagging indicator," and that the figure would "get worse before it gets better."

The weak U.S. dollar could work for the country's benefit: "if you have an export product, your demand will increase as the dollar falls. Exporters are doing well," Mr. Dye said.

Mr. Dye was encouraged, however, by the prospect of the $168 billion fiscal stimulus package, with checks anticipated to start going out in May.

The bottom line was that Mr. Dye called for a "short, relatively mild recession," through he warned that "things could get worse" with rising oil prices and potentially another fall on Wall Street.

Mercer County Executive Brian Hughes said despite the warning signs, 4,500 new jobs were created countywide in FY2007, with $5.7 million in new construction.

Mercer County and the Princeton Regional Chamber of Commerce sponsored the Economic Summit.

Princeton Weight Loss Program

I have been a weight loss counselor for 25 years, and never heard one person say they are hungry! Many people think they have a "thyroid" problem, but I have only had a handful of clients with medical issues that caused them to gain weight.

We overeat for so many reasons. Stress, boredom, habit, fear, abuse, illness, divorce — you name it, there is a reason to overeat. Food is a difficult addiction to conquer. It is necessary for survival, and, unlike other addictive substances, food is everywhere.

Anyone with a weight problem knows how many psychological problems occur from being overweight. You can't hide behind fat, and there is a definite stigma attached to it. You wear baggy clothes, cover up at the beach, and sneak food when no one is looking.

I opened a weight loss center because I was overweight as a child, and have a strong desire to help others lose weight. Other children made fun of me and it caused many body image problems.

During my senior year in high school I decided to lose weight. I couldn't stand being overweight any more. I flipped the "off" switch in my brain, and stopped bingeing and using food as my friend and comfort.

I developed tunnel vision and began eating healthy and exercising. It felt great and I loved being thinner. Food didn't own me anymore, and I was able to control my addiction.

The biggest challenge was ahead. How to keep the weight off as I entered the unstructured world of college and the "freshman 15"? I added a few more calories to my maintenance diet and played college sports, which made it easier to maintain my goal weight.

My next challenge was pregnancy — would

I be able to lose the baby weight and get back to my goal? Fortunately, my willpower allowed me to get back to my goal weight, and now, 20 years later, I weigh 10 pounds less than when I graduated from college! How can I inspire you to share the same success?

My program is based on five principles:

1. Listening and understanding why and how you eat.
2. Behavior modification so that you can break the patterns of food addiction.
3. Teach you how to choose the right foods in the right proportion.
4. Suggest a healthy and sustainable exercise program.
5. Positive coaching, supplemented by tough love when you need it!

You will be able to eat the foods you like in a way that fits your lifestyle. There are no prepackaged foods or supplements, and no crash dieting. You will learn how to lose weight gradually and finally keep it off.

I still remember the chubby little girl, afraid of the world and the ridicule. I still remember eating as a way to comfort my feelings. But now, with the perspective of time and a few sensible habits, I have kept a healthy weight for over 30 years, and helped thousands of clients do the same.

I will be writing these articles on a monthly basis for the next year. Please join me on a journey to significant and permanent weight loss. It won't happen quickly, and it won't be easy. But if you follow my program, I guarantee you will lose weight and keep it off.

My clients range in age from 10 years old to 80 years old. Next month I will be writing about the psychological aspects of eating. Think about why you overeat, and email me at joyce.hofmann@gmail.com, or call me at (609) 683-0022 if you have any questions. Eat healthy and stay happy.

Talk to Focus on Effects Of a Light-Weight Universe

"The Dark Side of the Universe" will be the topic of Professor Neta A. Bahcall's 2008 Evnin Lecture on Tuesday, April 8, at 8 p.m. in Reynolds Auditorium, A02 McDonnell Hall.

Ms. Bahcall will discuss some unexpected evidence about the Universe, which is apparently composed mostly of dark stuff; not only dark matter, but also "dark energy," a form of energy that opposes the pull of gravity and causes the expansion of the universe to accelerate. By combining recent observations of clusters of galaxies, distant supernovae, and the cosmic microwave background, evidence was found for a Universe that has only 5 percent "normal" matter, 20 percent dark matter, and 75 percent "dark energy". These observations suggest a Universe that is light-weight, with only 25 percent of the critical density that is needed to halt Universal expansion, and with a geometry that is flat, with no space curvature.

The Israeli-born Ms. Bahcall is the Eugene Higgins Professor of Astrophysics at Princeton University. She received her B.S. in physics and mathematics at Hebrew University, an M.S. in physics from the Weizman Institute of Science, and her Ph.D. in astrophysics from Tel Aviv University. She is a member of the National Academy of Sciences, and a past Vice-President of the American Astronomical Society. She has authored or co-authored nearly 300 publications.

The Evnin Lecture Series is an annual event sponsored by the Council on Science and Technology, and funded through an endowment from Anthony Evnin, Class of 1962. The April 8 lecture is intended for a lay audience and is open to all. McDonnell Hall is located off Washington Road, close to Fine Hall Tower. For more specific directions, see www.princeton.edu/cgi/map.

Citizenship Classes Offered At Princeton Public Library

The Latin American Task Force, in sponsorship with the Princeton Public Library, will offer free Citizenship Classes on Wednesday evenings from 7 to 8:30 p.m. in the conference room on the second floor of the Library, beginning on April 2 and running through May. Registration will take place at the first session.

The classes, which will prepare immigrants for the naturalization interview required as part of the process of becoming a United States citizen, will include U.S. history and civics, as well as a review of basic English.

While the classes are free, students will be expected to purchase a copy of the textbook to practice the material discussed.

When these classes were offered in Fall 2007, participants included immigrants from Argentina, China, Colombia, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Fiji, Guatemala, Haiti, Kosovo, Mexico, Peru, Taiwan and Venezuela. Several students have successfully passed their naturalization interviews and are now American citizens.

For more information, please call 924-1952 or visit www.princeton.edu/citizenship.

TOWN TALK®

A forum for Princeton residents to express opinions about local and national issues.

Question of the Week:

"Now that baseball season is underway, who do you think will go all the way?"

"This will be a very competitive season with old faces in new places. You have to watch out for the Dodgers because of the relocation of Manager Joe Torre who knows how to make winning teams. That said, my pick to win it all this year is the Boston Red Sox. They are having all of their pieces return; Manny Ramirez, David Ortiz, John Lester, and, of course, Josh Beckett. They will meet the Dodgers in the World Series."

— Reginald Galloway, Princeton University

"My heart says the Mets but I do not know if my head agrees. I hope it is not the Yankees and I am getting tired of the Red Sox so I hope that it is somebody else."

— Jim Schwerin, Leabrook Lane

"It is very early to tell but the Padres came real close last year so I have to go with them. I hate to think it because I like the Yankees but I just think the Padres will win."

— Valerie Abramchek, Rosedale Road

"I hope the Mets will win but my best guess is that the Red Sox will win again."

— Jack Hochman, Great Road

"It should be the Mets. I would like to see them win. I hope they can do it. I would like to see them win. I hope they can do it. I would like to see them win. I hope they can do it."

Rescue

The Princeton First Aid & Rescue Squad responded to 54 calls for service last week.

On Sunday, March 23, the Squad responded for an elderly woman found unresponsive in her wheelchair. The patient's labored respirations stopped shortly after the crew arrived, prompting them to ventilate her with oxygen. The crew also closely monitored her weak pulse throughout transport to University Medical Center at Princeton (UMCP).

On Thursday, March 27, the Squad responded for a head-on motor vehicle collision involving a car and truck. The impact caused the car to spin around, strike a pole, leave the road and come to rest with the driver's side rear wheel hanging over a small ravine.

Since the driver of the car was entrapped, the Squad's technical rescue team stabilized the vehicle before cutting off the roof and removing the patient, who was treated for knee, elbow and facial injuries and transported to UMCP.

Early Friday morning, the Squad responded for an intoxicated female who was found lying on the floor of an elevator. The disoriented, combative patient was transported to UMCP.

The Princeton First Aid & Rescue Squad is a non-profit organization. For more information on donation or volunteering opportunities, call 924-3338 or visit www.pfars.org.

Police Blotter

Princeton Borough

Bryan Clark, 22, of Hopewell Township was arrested March 22 at 12:58 a.m. for DWI while driving on Nassau Street. Mr. Clark was taken to police headquarters and later released.

Brittney Holmes, 20, of Princeton Borough was arrested March 23 at 12:58 a.m. for attempting to use fake identification to get into the Ivy Inn at 248 Nassau Street. Ms. Holmes was taken to police headquarters and later released.

The Princeton Borough Police Department has reported the following warrant arrests:

John Landers, 25, of Riverton, on March 23, at 1:25 a.m., for a $171 warrant out of Florence Township Municipal Court;

Keith Wilson, 34, of Philadelphia, on March 25, at 5:14 a.m., for a $385 warrant out of Mansfield Township Municipal Court;

Donnell Armstrong, 34, of Trenton, on March 25, at 5:24 p.m., for an $89 warrant out of Trenton Municipal Court.

Princeton Township

On March 27 at approximately 10:30 p.m., police responded to reports of a motor vehicle accident on Route 206 near Cherry Valley Road involving Ann Hyatt-Stewart, 44, of Hillsborough, and her 2003 Toyota, and Craig Accosta, 32, of Old Bridge, and his 2006 Isuzu. According to police reports, patrols discovered Ms. Hyatt-Stewart trapped in her vehicle and called upon the Princeton First Aid & Rescue Squad to extricate her. She was taken to the University Medical Center at Princeton and was later released. The accident is under investigation and anyone who might have witnessed the scene is asked to call Ptl. Tony Strong at (609) 921-2100, ext. 876.

On March 28 at 2:48 p.m., police responded to a motor vehicle accident on Prospect Avenue near Carnegie Drive where Brittany Parisi, 19, of Clifton, reportedly swerved to avoid a small animal. She lost control of her 2007 Acura MDX, striking a mailbox and a tree, causing her car to overturn in the middle of the roadway. Ms. Parisi was taken to the University Medical Center at Princeton where she was treated for neck and head pain. She was charged with careless driving.

academic year, the existing Pre-K program will be re-configured, Ms. Wilson said. Currently, PRS offers Pre-K to 4-year-olds only. Those future costs will be offset by charging tuition: $6,000 per year for half-day, and $12,000 per year for full-day services.

Ms. Wilson specifically credited the Princeton Education Foundation, which raised over $300,000 for the schools in the last 18 months, as well as a planned $100,000 donation from the institute for ## Advanced Study.

Members of Borough Council and Township Committee were largely receptive to the proposed budget. Councilman Andrew Koontz urged the district to find alternate sources of funding in future years, while Councilwoman Barbara Trelstad suggested increased energy savings.

Ms. Wilson pointed to the current energy audit of all Princeton school and government buildings, saying that six school's HVAC systems have been updated, and that energy conservation had been an aim of the district:

"Shut it down, turn it off," she said, adding that computer controls for shutting systems down should be employed.

The Princeton Regional Schools budget will be up for vote Tuesday, April 15. Go to www.prs.k12.nj.us for more information.

PHS Asian Festival Features Fun, Food, and Fashion

Princeton High School is hosting an Asian Festival on Friday, April 4, from 7 to 9:30 p.m., in the school's gymnasium on Walnut Lane. Event organizers include students from PHS's Asian American Club, Chinese Club, and from the school's Chinese and Japanese language classes. Students from several heritages and backgrounds will share many aspects of Asian culture with the community.

Geared toward participants of all ages, activities will include origami, Chinese calligraphy, Japanese tea ceremony, DDR (Dance Dance Revolution, a music video game series), contests, sports, and games. Attendees will be able to angle for real goldfish that can be taken home.

A food court will feature the cuisines of Japan, Korea, and China.

The event is open to the public. Admission is free, and tickets will be available for purchase to participate in certain activities, and to buy food and beverages.

For more information, contact PHS Mandarin teacher Shwu-Fen Lin at (609) 806-4280 ext. 3757.

Roasted Brussels Sprouts and Potato Salad

from Carol Nykita, Whole Earth Deli staff

This recipe was born out of a love for roasted veggies and a quick survey of leftover produce in the fridge. Any fresh lettuce will do and Yukon Gold potatoes are recommended. Serve warm or at room temperature for best results.

Serves 2 as a main dish or 4 as a side dish

6 cups bite-sized 1/2-inch-thick potato slices

2 tbsl extra virgin olive oil

Salt and pepper to taste

2 to 3 tsp dried tarragon

4 cups (1 lb) Brussels sprouts, trimmed and cut into bite sized halves or quarters

4 cups shredded or torn lettuce (frisée + spinach works well, but any salad lettuce will do)

1/4 cup of your favorite homemade or bottled vinaigrette

2 to 3 tbsl toasted walnuts (optional)

Preheat oven to 400°F. Toss potatoes in 1 tbsl oil and salt and pepper and tarragon to taste. Place on baking tray and roast 20 to 30 minutes

After 10 minutes, toss Brussels sprouts with remaining 1 tbsl olive oil, place on a foil-lined baking tray, and place in the oven.

Continue roasting veggies for approximately 20 minutes, tossing potatoes and Brussels sprouts occasionally, until well done (browned and crispy on edges.)

Remove each veggie when done to your taste

Toss veggies with lettuce, vinaigrette, and walnuts and serve.

Township Committee Candidate Lambert Has Experience, Responsiveness Needed

To the Editor:

I enthusiastically support Casey Lambert's candidacy for Princeton Township Committee.

When Casey served her first term, 2002-2004, she and I shared several committee assignments and I was able to see first hand what a capable, involved, and intelligent member she was not only in her Township liaison positions but also in the wisdom, experience, and responsiveness she showed on Township Committee. It was refreshing to have someone who listened to the public and responded positively and thoughtfully to their concerns.

Casey worked on many issues while a member of Township Committee and she has continued work as a private citizen. I most appreciate Casey's early and dedicated attempts to preserve the Princeton Ridge. She started before the senior housing overlays went into place and continued during her term on the Environmental Commission. She rightly pointed out from the beginning that planning for housing of all types constitutes an important public policy issue that should be researched thoroughly before allowing development. Building expensive housing for older residents on an isolated, fragile and protected piece of land was not a wise solution. Casey will proactively work on the housing issue while upholding environmental standards. She is already working with outside experts to develop a model sustainability plan for Princeton.

Finally, as a long-time member of Borough Council, I see Casey as the person who can best bring about a change in the Township's relationship with the Borough. At a time when these two municipalities should be acting in concert on a host of important issues, we find ourselves quite literally in a stalemate. I think Casey is the person who can finally bring the Township into a new cooperative alliance with the Borough. In short, it is time for a new approach.

We are lucky to have Casey Lambert, a candidate with experience, wisdom, and good judgment, prepared once again to serve the community she has been a part of for 44 years. She will have my vote and I urge others to vote for her also.

Vote for "Conservative" School Budget Would Ensure Educational Excellence

To The Editor:

I write to urge Princetonians to vote on Tuesday, April 15 in favor of the school budget. As a parent actively involved in the schools (I'm a former president of the Riverside Elementary PTO), I have supported and continue to support the Princeton Regional Schools and its efforts to ensure educational excellence.

The budget up for vote on April 17 is very conservative; the overall tax impact is 3.32 percent, well under the 4 percent state imposed cap. However, the impact of the budget is different for the Township and the Borough. Princeton Township taxpayers will experience a one-cent tax rate decrease while taxpayers in the Borough will experience a 9.5 cent increase. These rates are not under the control of the Princeton Regional Schools, the School Board or, indeed, Princeton Township and Borough; rather, these rates are determined by the Mercer County Tax Board based on the market value of real estate in each municipality, the same way county tax rates are calculated. The tax formula changes year to year, sometimes favoring the Township, sometimes favoring the Borough; this year, individual Borough taxpayers are facing a bigger tax impact.

I am lucky enough to live in the Borough and will get to pay more this year than my Township peers. Yet I am still supporting the school budget because I understand that every effort was made to keep costs under control and that this year's budget is a fit for our tight economic times. Given increases in the cost of fuel and in health care, it is truly a reflection of the Board's hard work and careful budgeting that the school budget has come in with such a small increase. While this budget presents no new programs, it does maintain the tradition of educational excellence that is a Princeton tradition and, lest we forget, largely responsible for the value of a Princeton home. I urge voters to join me in voting "yes" on the budget on Tuesday, April 15.

Fellow Legislator Endorses Colleague, Bernie Miller, for Township Committee

To the Editor:

It is a pleasure for me to endorse Bernie Miller for Princeton Township Committee. Bernie has demonstrated time and again that he is concerned about the well-being of our residents. He has served on various municipal commissions and boards in the Township since 1970. He was one of the original social architects that helped plan and push for development of Griggs Farm, a housing project that includes affordable and market rate dwellings. He has led the fight for improved fire safety inspections of Township businesses, helped the Township Police Department restructure, and negotiated labor contracts with our Police and Public Works Departments. As chair of the Cable TV Committee in 2002, he pushed to update the internal technology so that TV 30 could continue to deliver stimulating programming.

The list of Bernie's accomplishments is testament to the kind of person we need and want on Princeton Township Committee. Please join me in voting for Bernie Miller.

Town's Heavily Traveled Thoroughfares Acquiring Unwanted "3rd World Charm"

To the Editor:

Has anyone ever figured out why our most heavily traveled streets have sort of a third world charm about them? Massive, immortal potholes seem to be a way of life.

Several years ago, there was a Pothole Hotline in the Township, which indicated that there might be some interest in repairing the most dangerous ones. Apparently other priorities arose.

Each resident quickly learns the location of the most dangerous routes. Harrison from Terhune to Nassau, a major thoroughfare, is also a major nightmare. Not as heavily traveled, but a left from Terhune into Grover is always a jarring experience.

If the answer is that we need to pay more taxes in order to have streets that are safe to navigate, never mind.

New Discounts, Workshop Were Features Of 77th Bryn Mawr-Wellesley Book Sale

To the Editor:

We have just completed the annual Bryn Mawr-Wellesley Book Sale in Princeton, and wish to express our appreciation to all those involved in making it a great community success. This is the 77th consecutive year of the sale. It contained some 80,000 books, tapes, videos and DVDs, and drew book/movie/music lovers from our community and the whole East Coast. The proceeds are used to help students from the Central New Jersey area attend Bryn Mawr and Wellesley colleges.

Princeton Day School makes this event possible by providing its facilities for the entire two weeks of its Spring vacation. We also rely on the year-long contributions of books from the community, the volunteer work of club members, families and friends, and of course our customers who eagerly look forward to the sale each year.

We had books of art, fiction and nonfiction for all ages, covering the entire range of tastes at very low cost. This year we also did special events such as Children's and Senior's discount times, and a workshop on "Is This Book Valuable?" Another highlight was Collector's Corner, featuring older and rare books of special interest. We sincerely thank all who participated in any facet of this remarkable event.

Everyone can help us continue this tradition by making tax-deductible donations of books throughout the year. Our warehouse is located in the rear parking lot at 32 Vandewater Street in Princeton and is open all year long, every Wednesday and Saturday from 10 a.m. to noon. The phone number is (609) 921-7479; the website, www.princetonol.com/groups/brynmawr.

Borough Councilman and chair of the PBDC. Council will choose from three possible candidates for the vacancy, including Mr. Wilkes, Anton Lahnston, and Craig Provorny. Mr. Lahnston and Mr. Provorny, despite volunteering their names for consideration, are not considered serious threats to Mr. Wilkes's candidacy.

Borough Council was expected Tuesday night to accept the PBDC findings after Town Topics press time. Council is now expected to install Mr. Wilkes on Council on April 8.

In the Township, what appeared to be the makings of a messy primary season has calmed down, with the Princeton Township Democratic Committee decisively selecting incumbent Deputy Mayor Bernie Miller and newcomer Sue Nemeth as its candidates for two available seats on Township Committee. Out of 19 ballots cast at the PTDC session Monday night, Mr. Miller received 15 votes, or 79 percent, Ms. Nemeth received 13 votes, or 68 percent, and Karen C. "Casey" Lambert received five votes, or 26 percent.

Ms. Lambert and Ms. Nemeth had supported each other's candidacies.

The recommendations from the PBDC and PTDC essentially translate into favorable ballot positioning in the June primary. The PTDC has a 50 percent threshold for endorsement. As Mr. Miller and Ms. Nemeth exceeded the 50 percent threshold, the PTDC recommendation to the Mercer County Democratic Chairman Richard McClellan is to have both candidates appear in the main Democratic column, with the official party slogan. If Ms. Lambert chooses to run in the primary, she will likely be in a separate column with no slogan.

Both PTDC and PBDC votes came following the Princeton Community Democratic Organization's Sunday vote, where neither Mr. Miller, Ms. Nemeth, or Ms. Lambert received outright endorsement, as none met the 60 percent support in their home municipality, or the requisite 50 percent from both Princetons. In that vote, with 240 ballots cast,

Mr. Miller secured 110 Township votes and 26 Borough votes, Ms. Nemeth had 98 in the Township and 30 in the Borough, and Ms. Lambert had 89 in the Township and 30 in the Borough.

Ms. Lambert's strong showing with Borough voters appears to be due to the residual impact of a Borough-oriented movement to unseat Mr. Miller, thereby installing Ms. Lambert and Ms. Nemeth on Township Committee, potentially creating enough votes on Committee to unseat Township Mayor Phyllis Marchand. Every year, the five-member Committee chooses one of its own to serve a one-year mayoral term. Ms. Marchand has received unanimous Committee support for 11 straight terms.

After Nine Years on Borough Council, Wendy Benchley Sets New Agenda

I can't begin to quantify Wendy's contributions because they have been immeasurable."

As Princeton Borough Councilwoman Wendy Benchley leaves her post this week after serving nine years, Mayor Mildred Trotman's comments reflect the thoughts of many who have been associated with Ms. Benchley over the years.

Her dedication, commitment, energy, and hard work have impressed both colleagues and friends. Ms. Benchley's characteristic willingness to spend the time needed to solve problems and find solutions and yet not relinquish her own strong convictions, in particular on the environment, traffic and transportation issues, and the preservation of the Princeton downtown, are hallmarks of her years on Council.

Notes her friend of long-standing, Sheldon Sturges, co-founder and managing director of Princeton Future: "The truly extraordinary thing about Wendy is that she has an extra boiler in her furnace, which she uses for the common good. She has an ability to reach out and care and act that few of us have. I have been very impressed with that capacity to care for the needs of others. And I think that everyone in the public sphere who has dealt with her feels kindly toward Wendy. She doesn't leave a trail of rancor."

Even-Handed

Mayor Trotman agrees with that observation. "I admire Wendy's even-handed way of dealing with those who opposed her point of view. She was always able to be sympathetic to another view, but at the same time, she stuck to what she felt needed to be done. I have thoroughly enjoyed working with her over all these years, and I do so fully appreciate her ability to delve into projects and then her tenacity in sticking with that project. I will really miss Wendy."

Ms. Benchley's early life gave no outward sign that one day she would serve in government. The second child of Dr. Harrison and Dorcas Wesson, Wendy (actually Winifred, named for her grandmother), she was born and brought up in Montclair, N.J. The family also consisted of her three brothers and one sister. A surgeon, her father served in the Philippines in World War II, and after the war, the Wessons spent summers in Connecticut, skied in Vermont, and took a driving trip across the country, among other family vacations.

"Going to my grandparents' house on an island off Stonington, Conn. was very much a part of my life," recalls Ms. Benchley. "I spent summers up there during my childhood with my parents, siblings, all my cousins, and aunts and uncles. I loved it. We'd go to the beach, sail, play games, and we'd also read aloud. The older cousins would read to us, and we loved The Black Stallion books and Lassie Come Home."

"These are wonderful childhood memories. It was like living on a commune, with all the cousins and the different personalities having to get along together. It was also a working farm, with cows and chickens. I milked cows and collected eggs."

Special Time

In Montclair, Wendy liked school, played tennis (a sport she continues to enjoy) and field hockey, as well as lots of outdoor games with neighborhood friends. "We had great times with all the neighborhood kids, including 'gang warfare' when we'd throw horse chestnuts at each other. It was a special time."

On weekends, she and her friends went to the movies ("after I had done my household chores"). A special favorite was From Here to Eternity.

"I also loved Elvis Presley," she says, with a smile. "He made my spine tingle!"

In high school, Wendy liked English class and developed a lifelong love of reading. And in a hint of what was to come, she ran for student council and was elected class secretary.

"Interestingly," she points out, "there was a large African-American community in Montclair in those days. This was in the 1950s, and it was very integrated. We all did a lot of socializing together. It was very SEEKING SOLUTIONS: "A saying I like to keep in mind is 'The pursuit of perfection prevents the accomplishment of the satisfactory.' I like grappling with that and trying to find solutions to problems. I hope that is what I've accomplished while on Council." Outgoing Princeton Borough Councilwoman Wendy Benchley, soon to focus her career on ocean conservation issues, is shown in her Princeton home.

After graduating from Montclair High School in 1959, Wendy enjoyed a European trip with the family. "It was a grand tour across France, Italy, Switzerland, etc. It was wonderful," she recalls. "My parents were so special and so much fun. Although he was a busy doctor, my father thought it was very important to spend time with the family."

Policy Issues

Wendy went to Skidmore College in Saratoga Springs, N.Y., majoring in psychology and philosophy, and she also organized conferences with other colleges on public policy issues, which stimulated an increasing interest in government generally.

"By junior year, I began to wish I had majored in government and political science," she explains. "I was taking more courses in that field by then.

"The seminal event for me in college, however, was the Civil Rights Movement. People were picketing Woolworth's in the South, so a couple of students and I picketed Woolworth's in Saratoga Springs. The police chief arrested us! Photographers and news people took pictures of us, and it was on the front page of the newspaper."

Wendy had the courage of her convictions, and she was not deterred. As she says, "Protesting in solidarity with the Civil Rights Movement was so important. I like grass roots action. That's where a great deal of change comes from. That's the way I've tried to participate in Princeton, working with people and trying to get them to participate."

Wendy liked college — including a visit to Princeton for a blind date — but by the time she graduated in 1963, she was ready for new adventures. Her first full-time job was with American Field Service in New York. "I loved that," she remembers. "I'd chaperone students from France and other countries, and I was also able to travel abroad.

There was more going on in her life now, however. The summer after graduation, she met a special young man in Nantucket. As she explains, "By now, I was madly in love! I had thought I wouldn't get married for years. I'd planned on a career — but then I met him. I had worked as a chambermaid in various inns all over the country in the summers. That's how I got to see a lot of places. My last summer doing this, I worked as a hostess at the Jared Coffin House in Nantucket."

Young Man

"One night, I had gone downstairs to help a busy waitress in the bar, and I noticed this dashing young man, smoking a Lucky Strike. I was a pack-a-day smoker then, and I was having a nicotine fit. I asked him for a drag on his cigarette, and he handed it over. I took a puff, then gave it back, and went upstairs. Later, he came up, and asked if I were free that night."

In fact, she already had a date, but decided this was too good to pass up, and said she was definitely free.

The "dashing young man" turned out to be Peter Benchley, then a reporter at The Washington Post, later to become famous as the author of the best-selling novel Jaws, which was also a mega-hit movie.

Within two weeks, the couple decided to get married!

"I went home to tell my parents," remembers Ms. Benchley, "and my dear, wonderful mother said, 'That's so nice, dear. We'd love to meet him.'"

As it turned out, they waited a year, and were married in September 1964. By then, Mr. Benchley was an editor at Newsweek, and the Benchleys lived in New York, where Wendy continued to work at American Field Service.

"Peter was TV editor for awhile, and we had three TVs in our bedroom, so he could watch all three networks. This was pre-cable, pre-video taping, etc.," says Ms. Benchley.

First Child

Soon, they headed to Washington, D.C., when Mr. Benchley became a speechwriter for President Lyndon Johnson. While in Washington, their first child, a daughter, Tracy, was born in 1967.

After President Johnson decided not to run again in 1968, "Peter was out of a job, and he was free-lancing," continues Ms. Benchley. "We were living as vagabonds in various houses that my parents found for us, when the owners were away, including in Stonington (where son Clayton was born in 1969. A third child, Christopher, would come along in 1987) and Glen Ridge, N.J. We were looking for a place to live, and we didn't have any money. Peter wanted to be near New York, and finally, we were able to get a house in Pennington in 1970."

Their lives were about to change dramatically. "Peter had this idea for a novel," explains Ms. Benchley, "and he wrote Jaws in the Blackwell Furnace Repair Shop in Pennington. When he was starting to write it, he told me about the idea, and I said, 'Honey, get another idea! That's the difference between a practical person like me and someone with an amazing imagination.'"

Jaws was published in 1974, and after the movie rights were later sold, the Benchleys decided to move to Princeton. "Princeton made sense. Peter still wanted to be near New York, and we hoped for a place with heart and soul. We liked the Princeton downtown and the idea of a university town. We also liked the diversity of the community."

The magnitude of the success of Jaws was at first overwhelming, recalls Ms. Benchley. "When Peter told me the movie rights had been purchased and what it sold for, I burst into tears! I said, 'Our lives are ruined! Too much notoriety, too much change.' Little did I know then how much Jaws would open up the world to us."

It was hard in some ways in the beginning, she adds. "The attitude of some people changed toward us, whether out of envy or a notion of our 'celebrity' status. They didn't treat us the same. They didn't discuss things or argue with us anymore. It was as if, somehow, we were almost not there in the same way as before. That shocked me."

Major Focus

During the Benchley's four years in Pennington, Ms. Benchley had become involved with the League of Women Voters. "I was also a member of a grass roots group that got recycling going," she explains. "We found that with enough information and persuasion, you really can get people to change their habits."

This launched what was to become a major focus in Ms. Benchley's life — the need to protect and preserve the environment.

"In 1986, I was nominated to become a member of the board of the Environmental Defense Fund (EDF)," she says. "This is a non-profit environmental advocacy organization with branches in many cities in the U.S. We worked on many major environmental issues."

During her 17 years with the organization, including two terms as nominating committee chair, Ms. Benchley realized the ongoing need to have a range of experts involved in the cause. "We saw how important it was to continue not only to have top-notch scientists, but also economists, attorneys, and business men and women, on the board, all people who can help the organization achieve its goals."

"How do you go about formulating an effective environmental policy? You need to have all the 'stakeholders' participate. EDF was one of the first groups to go to major corporations and businesses and show them how it is economically beneficial for them to change their practices. We were able to convince McDonald's and UPS, among many others."

During this time, Mr. Benchley's career continued to flourish with the publication of more novels, movie production, and at the same time, he developed a strong interest in ocean conservation and protection of marine life.

Scuba Diving

He and Mrs. Benchley took many trips together, including scuba diving explorations for National Geographic. "We had trips around the world," she recalls. "We saw great white sharks, and did conservation films. I had to overcome my fear of diving, but I was determined not to be left behind."

Sometimes, it was more than she bargained for. "Peter liked to tell a story about my saving his life," she reports. "He had gone down in a cage to watch the Great Whites, and one was trying to bite through the rope which attached the cage to the boat. If that happened, the shark would drag the cage to the bottom of the ocean with Peter in it. Just in time, I was able to jerk the rope out of the jaws of the shark. It was an adrenaline-rush moment!"

"More recently on another dive, I swam with a giant manta ray, with a 15-foot wing span, and on a night dive in the Maldives we encountered three white-tipped sharks, a five-foot moray eel, a huge sleeping turtle, and a five-foot barracuda, all, except for the turtle, actively feeding within the beam of my flashlight."

Such matchless experiences reinforced Ms. Benchley's determination to do all she could to help protect the environment, whether it be air, land, or water.

Back home in Princeton, she helped found the New Jersey Environmental Federation, which received an award from then Governor James Florio. As she explains, "A young man arrived at the door one day, and said his organization wanted to put all the different environmental grass roots groups together, consolidate them, and could I help. I said 'yes.'"

"We had a Princeton area committee, including business people and community volunteers — a mix of supporters. We created a traveling show called 'Home-Safe-Home,' which showed how to use safe products to clean the house that would not harm the environment."

Political Action

As Ms. Benchley became increasingly involved in environmental issues, she began to see the importance of political action in furthering constructive policies. The proposed building of an incinerator on Duck Island south of Trenton was the issue which propelled her into politics.

"This incinerator was a big issue across New Jersey," she explains. "The state decided to build an incinerator in each county to burn everything, including plastic. It would be expensive, polluting, give off mercury vapor, PCBs, and dioxins, and it would defeat recycling. I was in total opposition. This was the reason I decided to run for office. I was so frustrated with our lack of power to be able to stop this. I realized the only way to have power was if some of us got elected."

Ms. Benchley was able to get on the ballot as an independent candidate for the Mercer County Board of Freeholders. It was at this time that she met Beth Healey, a Princeton resident, active in politics, who teaches history at City College in Philadelphia.

"I remember listening to Wendy talk," says Ms. Healey, "and I thought, 'She's really good.'"

Although Ms. Benchley lost the election, she did well enough to run the next year, this time as a Democrat. "Wendy asked if I'd be interested in helping her, and I became her campaign manager," continues Ms. Healey. "We'd go every night to different counties

Girls making a difference

Princeton Personality

and talk to people. Wendy has a great capacity to relate to people from all walks of life, to sit down and listen to them. She really enjoys diversity. I have never met anyone like her. She is the most wonderful person."

In the second election, Ms. Benchley prevailed and served as a freeholder for two and a half years. "I loved running for office, including going around the county to different towns and meetings," she recalls. "I met a great variety of marvelous people, and I liked hearing about their lives and talking about the issues."

Eventually, she adds, the incinerator was blocked from construction by a ruling of the New Jersey Supreme Court.

Local Level

During her time as a freeholder, she had also worked with the Princeton Community Democratic Organization, and gradually, her interest turned to Princeton politics. "I began to think about running for Borough Council. As a freeholder, I was looking at issues, such as transportation, traffic, affordable housing in the county, and I realized this was equally important on the local level."

Former Borough Mayor Marvin Reed urged Ms. Benchley to enter the race. As he says, "There was a vacancy on Council, and I went to Wendy and said, 'We want you here in Princeton.' I've known her for at least 25 years. When I first got interested in local political activity, she was often one of the people involved in flying the environmental flag. It was good to have her on Council. She added balance because she was so interested in environmental issues, and she was also interested in the Planning Board on which she served."

"Wendy was also a strong supporter of what we tried to do downtown with the Albert Hinds Plaza, the parking garage, and our efforts to make the downtown more exciting and a focus for people. I know whenever I need another strong advocate alongside me, I can always call on Wendy, and she'll be there."

While on Council, in addition to serving on the Planning Board, Ms. Benchley was on the Master Plan Committee, and liaison to the Princeton Environmental Commission, Traffic and Transportation Committees, and the Shade Tree Committee. "I specialized in land use planning, traffic and transportation issues, and preservation of the downtown," she explains. "I felt strongly that the new plaza and parking garage downtown would benefit the merchants, the citizens, and the town. Being a Councilwoman allows you the opportunity to make decisions about the town and also go out into the community and pull people together to try to solve a problem."

"For example," she points out, "there was parking problem around the high school, with complaints about where and how students were parking their cars. I thought, 'Let's bring the school board, principal, students, and neighbors together to find a solution. Now, there is permit parking, and it's successful. The students understand that being able to park is a privilege and a responsibility.'"

Former Princeton Township Committeewoman Casey Lambert, a long-time friend of Ms. Benchley, and who is running again for Township Committee, worked with her on the parking situation. "I saw Wendy in action during that time and saw how effective she can be. I've known Wendy since we were young, young marrieds in Princeton many years ago, and even then she showed an amazing social awareness. When she entered politics, she could institutionalize her energy, intelligence, thoughtfulness, and concern for the public good."

Sense of Humor

"Wendy is one of the warmest, most caring people I know. She also has a lively sense of humor, which helps enormously in politics."

Princeton resident Gail

Ullman, who served with Ms. Benchley on the Planning Board and on the Princeton Environmental Commission, agrees, and notes important lessons she has taken from Ms. Benchley.

"I have learned a great deal from her by the examples she set, among which are: (1) Drink a cup of caffeinated coffee before a meeting to be sure you are as alert as your colleagues should you need to debate them in the wee hours. (2) Set clear priorities, state them, and stick with them. (3) Never assume that your listeners will 'get it' the first time you state something; state it again and again until they think it is an inescapable conclusion. (4) Always treat the public with respect and be polite even when the public or your colleagues are being intemperate. (5) Look great and pay attention to the subject at hand no matter what sad event may be happening in your private life."

"What I remember is how she did these things — with zest and honesty."

Ms. Benchley remains concerned about Princeton's future. "What is important about Princeton is that there is such a variety of income levels, the diversity of the people, and having the University here. I think it is very important to keep Princeton diverse — economically, racially, and with all ages represented."

"Princeton Future has done a great job, as have the Master Plan Committee and Borough Council, in getting the populace to be aware of how people want Princeton to grow. Things have to evolve, but beautiful areas in Princeton, including open space and historically-significant houses, should be preserved. And certainly, the downtown should be preserved."

Big Difference

She is particularly pleased with the planned introduction of jitney service in the downtown. "I have been talking about the jitney since I came to Council. It's wonderful that Princeton University will start this, and eventually, it could become a joint venture with the Borough. We really need four to six jitneys zipping around town. Most of the traffic in Princeton is local. Even a 10 percent reduction of cars could make a big difference."

In addition to her work on Council, Ms. Benchley has also spent time working with Creative Theatre, a very popular Princeton institution in the 1970s and '80s, and she has been a strong supporter and fundraiser for Isles, the Trenton organization which fosters self-sufficient families in sustainable communities.

In 2003, Ms. Benchley was honored by the Delaware & Raritan Greenway for her "25 years of tireless work in environmental preservation and land stewardship."

Now after nine years on Council, she has decided to turn her attention full-time to ocean conservation, and it is a bittersweet moment. "Serving on Council has been the most stimulating and fascinating job I've ever had. Government is such a collaborative process. I never did anything without the help of other people. I may have initiated things, but anything that was accomplished was through the efforts of others."

Shark Protection

Two years ago, Mrs. Benchley's husband died, and her plans to concentrate on ocean preservation is a way to continue work they both did in that field. "I want to look into all aspects of ocean life and especially try to work with Peter's legacy in shark protection," she explains. "For example, I will soon be speaking before the Oaks Bluff Board of Selectmen in Martha's Vineyard on the need to stop their shark fishing tournament. Sharks are being decimated around the world. People should celebrate their marine life, not destroy it for the sake of recreation."

"I look forward to helping in whatever small way I can to move the ocean conservation agenda. I also want to accompany that with wonderful times spent with family (now including five grandchildren) and friends, and more time on the ocean, on a boat, and diving to be with the creatures of the ocean. I want to combine ocean conservation with field trips."

"The most important thing is really to have joy in what you are doing," she continues. "Love, love what you do. How truly fortunate Peter and I felt as we were so blessed when Jaws became such a great success. It liberated us to follow our hearts' desires and our intellectual pursuits."

It also gave them an opportunity to be exceedingly generous, notes Beth Healey. "They never said anything about it, but Wendy and Peter were so generous in so many ways — to the Democratic Party, to charities, organizations, and to individuals. They were two of the most generous people I have known."

Not all, but many who serve in government or in a volunteer capacity for their community do so because they wish to be agents for positive change, and in that pursuit, they are optimists. Wendy Benchley is one of them.

As Peter Benchley said of her to a friend: "Wendy is the one who can find the tinsel on any tree."

Books

Read the Book, See the Film: "Flatland" is Program Opener

The publication of Flatland: The Movie Edition, a companion volume to a new movie version of Edwin Abbott's classic 1884 mathematical novel, served as the occasion for last week's opening program in "Thinking Allowed," a collaborative effort between Princeton University Press and the Princeton Public Library, featuring talks at the library by authors of newly-released PU Press books.

Brown University mathematician Thomas Banchoff spoke before and after a showing of the animated movie, which features the voices of Martin Sheen as the two-dimensional Arthur Square, and Kristen Bell, as his granddaughter, Hex. Michael York is the voice of the mysterious stranger who helps to enlighten Arthur about the existence of three dimensions, and, consequently, Hex, who already has her suspicions.

Princeton University Press executive math editor Vicky Kearn introduced Mr. Banchoff, whom she described as "Mr. Flatland." It was Ms. Kearn who alerted Mr. Banchoff to the movie-in-the-making; he ultimately became an advisor to the production and created the new book, which includes an introduction by him, as well as the original text of Flatland, essays by movie creators Seth Caplan, Jeffrey Travis, and Dano Johnson, and images from the film. The book is dedicated "To teachers who inspire and expand our imagination."

A Favorite Book

Mr. Banchoff, a native Trentonian, said he fell in love with Flatland when he first read it as a 10-year-old. While it is ostensibly a story about mathematics, he noted, it is also a closely-observed satire of Victorian England, which is "still fresh" today. It has been translated into 20 languages, and there were several earlier film versions of it, including one that was created at Harvard University and narrated by Dudley Moore in the 1960s, before computer animation.

Mr. Banchoff described Abbott as a "teacher par excellence," who wanted to get his students to open up to new ideas. "It is difficult to summarize the life work of a man as broad as Abbott," Mr. Banchoff wrote in an earlier article, "but one theme emerges which unifies most of his efforts. He was concerned primarily with miracles and illusions, which in a very real sense he considered to be the same thing. We cannot know the Transcendental directly, and if ever

TWO-DIMENSIONAL: Circles, a higher (but not necessarily wiser) order of characters as they are portrayed in the new animated version of "Flatland."

we do receive glimpses of this realm, we will not be able to communicate our insights clearly. Yet we must try, using all the imperfect means of communication at our disposal even though we risk being misunderstood, rejected, and finally persecuted. This is the central lesson of the Gospels, and Abbott was a theologian who cared about the way the Gospels were received, in their own day and in his day."

Besides being a distinguished teacher, Mr. Banchoff observed, Abbott was also "a social leader, who wanted people to be more tolerant." His efforts to promote social justice — including rights for women — and his concern for those in need are still relevant today, he added.

A Young Audience

Children in the audience scurried to sit on the floor in the front of the library's Community Room to the view the film, which received a positive reception when it was shown at a Mathematical Association of America meeting a year-and-a-half ago. "Maybe there are worlds beyond our world," suggested Mr. Banchoff to his attentive listeners after the movie. "It's a challenge to think about a higher realm."

Copies of both the book and DVD were available for sale at the end of the program. They may also be borrowed from the library.

"Thinking Allowed" continues on April 8 when author Graham Burnett will talk about his new book Trying Leviathan: The Nineteenth-Century New York Court Case that Put the Whale on Trial and Challenged the Order of Nature.

Shteyngart and Moody Reading Next Week

Princeton University's Program in Creative Writing is hosting a reading by fiction writers Gary Shteyngart and Rick Moody on Wednesday, April 9, at 4:30 p.m. in the James M. Stewart '32 Film Theater, located in the Lewis Center for the Arts at 185 Nassau Street.

The writers will be introduced by Jeffrey Eugenides.

Mr. Moody is best known for his 1994 novel The Ice Storm. His first novel, Garden State, was about young people growing up in the industrial wasteland of northern New Jersey. His memoir The Black Veil (2002) won the PEN/Martha Albrand Award for the Art of the Memoir. He has also received the Addison Metcalf Award, the Paris Review Aga Khan Prize, and a Guggenheim Fellowship. His work has appeared in The New Yorker, Esquire, Harper's, Details,

The New York Times, and Grand Street. His most recent novel is The Diviners, published in 2005. In 2007, Right Livelihoods, a collection of three novellas, appeared.

Born in Leningrad, Mr. Shteyngart emigrated to the United States in 1979. His novels include The Russian Debutante's Handbook (2003) and Absurdistan (2006), and his work has appeared in The New Yorker, Granta, Travel and Leisure, and The New York Times. A third novel, set in Albany in the year 2040, a Russian émigré writing instructor who was the distant nemesis of the main character in Absurdistan.

Chinua Achebe Draws Large Crowd In Final "Princeton Reads" Event

Chinua Achebe, often called the "father of African literature," engaged a standing-room-only crowd at the Nassau Presbyterian Church last Wednesday in the culminating event of "Princeton Reads," a month-long celebration of his book, Things Fall Apart.

In her opening remarks, Princeton Public Library Director Leslie Burger lauded the third anniversary of "Princeton Reads," which she described as the "collective act of reading the same title." She noted that over ten million copies of Things Fall Apart, which is celebrating its 50th anniversary, have been printed and it has been translated in over 50 languages. The 125 copies owned by the library, she noted, were all out on loan, and copies of the book had been available throughout the month at various Princeton eateries.

Princeton University English Professor Simon Gikandi introduced Mr. Achebe, who won the Man Booker International Prize in 2007 in honor of his literary career, as "a cultural institution." Kwame Anthony Appiah, Laurance S. Rockefeller University Professor of Philosophy and the University Center for Human Values, was Mr. Achebe's interlocutor for the event.

Introduced by Mr. Gikandi as "one of the most perceptive students of African culture," Mr. Appiah said that he remembered interviewing Mr. Achebe in Cambridge, England for an article in the Times Liter- ary Supplement in 1982. He was struck at that time, he said, by Mr. Achebe's belief that "we have the capacity for diverse identities," each with its own inherent responsibilities.

The 77-year-old writer, who was paralyzed from the waist down after a car accident in 1990, playfully declared that it was only recently that he understood the passage he was about to read from Things Fall Apart. He realized, he said, that it was "relevant to everything we say about Africa and the African condition." He observed that since it was his first book, he was "not fully aware" of what he was doing. He did, however, describe his strong feeling of responsibility to write it, in the face of the complete absence of African books in the world he grew up in. "There was a gap on the bookshelf," he observed. The British novels he and his community were given "weren't quite what I was looking for. If you don't like the stories being told about you, they are not acceptable." While Joseph Conrad's Heart of Darkness claimed that Africans' language had been taken away, Achebe said, he "knew better."

After Mr. Achebe's reading, which described a village elder addressing the family of the "flawed hero" who had been banished from his own community because of an accidental murder, Mr. Appiah wondered how the author, who was only in his twenties when he wrote the book, was able to speak so convincingly in the voice of an older man. Mr. Achebe responded by describing the "double life" he lived as a youngster whose family had converted to Christianity in a community where not everyone else had converted. Feeling "the difference" in his life, he said, he "wanted to know what was going on in the village," so he always hung around old men, who impressed him as orators. An older sister also instilled a passion for narrative tradition in him.

When Mr. Appiah asked about the difficulty of "writing in English about that which had not been written about before," Mr. Achebe responded by saying that it had not been "a struggle in the sense of something unpleasant. I was aware of the struggle between two languages being used simultaneously. English is profoundly different, but I found that it was possible for the two languages to hold a conversation — to talk to each other. It struck me that this was what I should do: use language with respect."

Asked about Nigerian politics today, Mr. Achebe declared that "Nigeria is a great disappointment to me. I can't say that too strongly, or too frequently." He said that he is hopeful, however, about the future. The country is "well-equipped with human resources, antiquities, and petroleum," and although they are not being used right now, it is possible that there will be change.

Of the future of African literature Mr. Achebe said that he expects the next generation "to have a really strong body of writers," adding that, "I think something is cooking." As for his own writing experience, he said that he "cannot believe my good fortune in writing that book. Sometimes I say, 'That book wrote me; it taught me what to do.'"

Author Lawrence Hill To Read at Trinity Church

Author Lawrence Hill will read at Trinity Church, Princeton, on Friday, April 4 at 7 p.m. in The George Thomas Room, 33 Mercer Street. A wine and cheese reception will follow. The event was announced by Lauren B. Davis, Trinity Church's Writer-in-Residence.

Mr. Hill's sixth book, Someone Knows My Name, a novel, became a national bestseller in Canada and was longlisted for the Scotiabank Giller Prize. In a review earlier this year, the New York Times called the book "a wonderfully written fictional slave narrative ... populated by vivid characters and rendered in fascinating detail." Mr. Hill's seventh book, the non-fiction work The Deserter's Tale: the Story of an Ordinary Soldier Who Walked Away from the War in Iraq (written with Joshua Key) also appeared in 2007 in Canada, the United States and Australia and is being translated and published in eight other countries.

His father and a white mother who emigrated to Canada from the United States, Mr. Hill was greatly influenced by his parents' work in the human rights movement. Much of his writing — such as his bestselling memoir Block Berry, Sweet Juice: On Being Black and White in Canada (HarperCollins Canada, 2001) — touches on issues of identity and belonging.

Formerly a reporter with The Globe and Mail and The Winnipeg Free Press, Mr. Hill has lived across Canada, in Baltimore, and in Spain and France. As a volunteer with Canadian Crossroads International, he has traveled to the West African countries Niger, Cameroon and Mali. He lives in Ontario with his wife and five children. For more information, visit Mr. Hill's website, www.lawrencehill.com.

"We All Have a Story": A Memoirist on Memoirs

Describing a memoir as the creating of a story that "must expand and accrue like an Alice Munro short story, a Hank Williams song, a poem by Langston Hughes, or a novel by Willa Cather," writer Nicholas Dawidoff, this year's Anschutz Distinguished Fellow in American Studies at Princeton, recently spoke about the art of memoir-writing at the James. M. Stewart '32 Theater. He called his talk "Next to Love is the Desire for Love: The Search for Meaning in American Memoir," taking a line from a Wallace Stevens poem.

Mr. Dawidoff, who lives in New York City, recently completed his own memoir, The Crowd Sounds Happy: A Story of Love, Madness and Baseball, described by his publisher, Pantheon Books, as "a completely unusual coming-of-age story about growing up in New Haven with a fiercely principled single mother, an absent and dangerous father, and a burgeoning love of baseball." It is due out in May. Mr. Dawidoff is not new to the genre: in 2002 he published Fly Swatter: A Portrait of an Exceptional Character, a remembrance of his grandfather, the late Harvard economist, Alexander Gerschenkron, which was nominated for the 2003 Pulitzer Prize in biography. Besides being a distinguished academic, his grandfather had the distinction of being propositioned by Marlene Dietrich on an airplane.

The Catcher Was a Spy: The Mysterious Life of Moe Berg. Mr. Dawidoff's book about the American baseball player ("the brainiest guy in baseball," who graduated magna cum laude from Princeton), was a best-seller.

Recalling his grandfather's passion for rereading Anna Karenina (he would return to page one as soon as he'd finished it), Mr. Dawidoff suggested that it doesn't matter whether a book is about a "great true character" or a fictional one, as long as the necessarily flawed hero has a full complement of human traits. "Wrinkles, optimism, the smell of witch hazel, an obsession with the IRS, a 'whites only' sign in a store, R.C. Cola, and what happens to a parent who recognizes that she has a favorite among her children" have all been used as touchstones in memoirs, he observed. Citing Norman Maclean (author of A River Runs Through It), he added that "anything can become interesting in the hands of a beautiful writer."

"Grail of Pure Objectivity"

Mr. Dawidoff, who has also been a Guggenheim Fellow, a Civitella Ranieri Fellow, and a Berlin Prize Fellow of the American Academy, said that he believed that fact-checking is a good thing, particularly in light of "recent shams and charlatans." The "more truth in a memoir the better," he added, noting that although writers may imply that they are giving you "the whole story," it is, more often than not, an idiosyncratic representation, due to the "vagaries of memory." Recalling Ian Frazier's Family, which began when Mr. Frazier tried to make sense out of the artifacts that remained after his parents died, Mr. Dawidoff, whose father suffered from severe mental illness, spoke of memoir-writing as an effort to try "to understand people we love," and to create "meaning that will defeat death."

The recipient of the Anschutz Distinguished Fellowship is appointed annually by the Princeton University Program in American Studies. The fellowship is designed to enable a leading scholar or practitioner in American arts, letters, politics, or commerce to come to Princeton for one semester to engage in campus life and teach one multidisciplinary seminar course for upper-division undergraduates. In Mr. Dawidoff's case, the course is called "Americans at Work and Play."

Book Talk, Exhibit Focus On AIDS and Politics

Labyrinth Books and Princeton University's Department of Anthropology are co-sponsoring a book talk with anthropologist and author João Biehl in honor of his new book, Will to Live, on Tuesday, April 8, at 5:30 p.m. at Labyrinth Books. Torben Eskerod's photographs from the book, which was published by Princeton University Press, will be on view.

Will to Live tells how Brazil became the first developing country to universalize access to life-saving AIDS therapies, a breakthrough made possible by an unexpected alliance of activists, government reformers, development agencies, and the pharmaceutical industry. Mr. Biehl also tells why this policy, hailed as a model worldwide, has been so difficult to implement among poor Brazilians with HIV/AIDS, who are often stigmatized as noncompliant or untreatable. More broadly, Mr. Biehl examines the political economy of the pharmaceuticals that lies behind large-scale treatment rollouts, revealing the possibilities and inequalities that come with a magic bullet approach to health care.

"Will to Live is a wonderful contribution not only to anthropology, but also to social medicine, medical ethics, and our understanding of the pharmaceutical industry," said Harvard University's Paul E. Farmer, the founding director of Partners In Health. "At the same time, it provides an intimate view of what it's like to live with both AIDS and poverty in Brazil. This is one of the few studies of AIDS that can claim to move easily between a deeply affecting psychological analysis, born of careful ethnographic work and of long-term conversations few are privileged to have, and a more experience-distant look at diagnostic technologies, the way drugs are used, and the medical professionals who deliver care. The photographs by Torben Eskerod are both beautiful and haunting and lend even more depth to this remarkable book."

João Biehl, an associate professor of anthropology at Princeton University, and Torben Eskerod, an artist and freelance photographer based in Copenhagen, collaborated earlier on the award-winning book Vita: Life in a Zone of Social Abandonment.

This event is free and open to the public. For more information, write to info-pr@labyrinthbooks.com.

Poet Susan Deborah King Reading at Seminary

Author of One-Breasted Woman, Susan Deborah King will be coming to Princeton Theological Seminary for a poetry reading on Thursday, April 3, at 7:30 p.m. in the Main Lounge of the Mackay Campus Center.

The subject of the book is a breast cancer diagnosis and subsequent mastectomy. The act of writing was an essential part of her recovery.

According to her preface: "The process of diagnosis, treatment and recovery, and the writing about it was indeed a transformative one, leaving me with an abiding sense of poignancy about our life's brevity, gratitude for it, and joy."

Ms. King has taught writing at the University of Minnesota, the Loft, and United Theological Seminary. Formerly a Presbyterian minister and psychotherapist, she leads retreats on creativity and spirituality. The founding director of the Literary Witnesses Reading Series at Plymouth Congregational Church in Minneapolis, she has published two previous poetry books: Coven and Tabernacle: Poems of an Island.

This event is free and open to the public. It is sponsored by Princeton Seminary's Office of Field Education, the Wholistic Health Initiative, the Women's Center, and the Women in Church and Ministry Council. For more information, contact Jacqueline Lapsley at jacqueline.lapsley@ptsem.edu.

Public Library Hosts Poetry Journal Launch Party

The Princeton Public Library will celebrate the 35th anniversary of U.S. 1 Worksheets, the journal of the U.S. 1 Poets' Cooperative, with a party on Sunday, April 6, at 2 p.m. The free event is part of the library's observance of National Poetry Month.

This year's edition of U.S. 1 Worksheets, which is Volume 53, will feature 94 poems selected from more than 1,000 submitted by poets from New Jersey, and throughout the U.S. and Canada. Some of the poets whose work appears in the journal will read from their works at the launch party, which will take place in the library's first floor Community Room. Refreshments will be served and copies of the journal will be available for sale.

"Our hope is that we have produced a journal of fine, accessible, thought-provoking poems, sprinkled with a bit of humor," said Nancy Scott, the journal's managing editor. "This is a selection of poems readers will want to enjoy over and over."

U.S. 1 Worksheets has evolved from a 10-page folded tabloid to a bound, 104-page journal. An all-volunteer staff from the cooperative does the editing, proofreading, layout, and marketing. Paul Cockrell,

"This has been a grassroots effort from the beginning," Ms. Scott said. "Luckily, we have members with expertise in some of these areas, and they have graciously donated their time and energy to producing a top-flight journal."

The U.S. 1 Poets' Cooperative began in 1973, when a small group of poets in central New Jersey got together informally to share their poems and their love of poetry. Poets throughout the region attend the group's weekly meetings in members' homes to share and critique each others' work.

Since 2004, the cooperative and the library have co-sponsored the monthly series

U.S.1 Poets' Invite, which features two poets reading for 20 minutes each, followed by an open mic session. Spring programs in the series will feature Bonnie Minnick and Christine E. Salvatore on Wednesday, April 23 at 7:30 p.m., and Alicia Ostriker and Richard Tayson on Wednesday, May 28 at 7:30 p.m.

Other National Poetry Month programs at the library include an edition of the Voices Multilingual Poetry Night on Thursday, April 10, at 7 p.m., and an appearance by poet Terry Blackhawk on Saturday, April 26, at 2 p.m. Throughout the month, the library will host a second edition of its popular poetry podcast blog, <http://pplpaet-podcast.wordpress.com>.

ART REVIEW

Poets and Players in New York's Horn of Plenty

My rationale for this week's potpourri is that the subject is the ultimate potpourri, Manhattan, where you can go from John Milton to Sonny Rollins without missing a beat.

Robert Fagles

Right now, though, I'm thinking about longtime Princeton resident Robert Fagles, who died last Wednesday. All the obituaries, including the one in Town Topics, will of course mention his acclaimed translations of Homer and Virgil, but with this column at my disposal, and with Milton among its subjects, I'd rather quote his colleague and fellow translator, Robert Hollander, who, according to an October 2006 New York Times piece by Charles McGrath, once compared him to "a young John Milton, schooling himself, learning his craft, before making his assault on Parnassus." I'm also thinking of the part he played in one of Logan Fox's warmest Micawber memories. "We were both early birds," Logan told me last year a few weeks before Micawber Books closed its doors. "Almost every morning at around 6:30 I'd be walking up to the store, and I'd see him across the street on his way to the library to work on his translations, and we'd give each other a wave, and then go into our respective worlds. It was one of those special Princeton experiences."

Davis at 100

Translators are impersonators, or at least that's what Robert Fagles implies in the McGrath article. Speaking of the art of translation, he also said "Cadence is everything," which could just as easily serve to define the art of that most brilliantly cadenced impersonator Bette Davis. She belongs in this potpourri because she was born 100 years ago this Saturday. Having devoted a birthday column to her arch rival Joan Crawford, how can I not at least mention the woman Terrence Rafferty calls "the greatest of Hollywood actresses"? As I found out last week, it's impossible to write of Joan Crawford without mentioning Bette Davis and even harder to write about Edward Albee's Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? without reference to the Bette Davis impersonation ("What a dimpl!") that provides the play's opening thrust. Then there was Kim Carnes's hit, "Bette Davis Eyes," and Madonna's reference to her in "Vogue" ("Bette Davis we love you"), not to mention the U.S. Postal Service's plan for a Bette Davis stamp this year. Even people who have never seen her films know how she held a cigarette. More to the point, she turned up last week in jazz legend Sonny Rollins's conversation with Gary Giddins at the CUNY Graduate Center, which is the event that lured me into the city.

A Night in the Apple

When friends heard I was planning to spend the night in Manhattan, they suggested it might be fun to stay at the Algonquin, the ultimate literary/show biz hotel that not long ago promised published writers a discount. At $490 a night for a single room, a healthy discount would have come in handy, and I tried, having once been interviewed there as "a young Hoosier author looking at the writing game." After a chilly is-he-kidding? online silence from the Algonquin, I tried some more sensible options but the rare $100-$150 a night singles were all booked up. So I decided to go all out for New York nostalgia and stay at the West Side YMCA on 63rd Street, which once housed my old school, McBurney. In case you're interested, you can get a clean if not spacious room with a bath and most of the usual perks (shampoo, hair dryer, bedside radio/alarm, TV) for $150 a night. If you don't mind sharing a bath, you can do it for $50 less, and you're just around the corner from Lincoln Center and half a block from Central Park. As for the building itself, it's a smoky Romanesque Gothic sort of a character with a tiled lobby area steeped in the aura of mid-century Manhattan, especially if you used to play after-school games of ping pong in the room adjoining the cafeteria.

Milton in Manhattan

Pushing through the doors of Port Authority into the Eighth Avenue mob scene around 2 p.m. on a matinee Wednesday is an intense experience, and the intensity doesn't really let up until you get to Bryant Park and the New York Public Library, where I took the elevator to the third-floor McGraw Rotunda outside the Main Reading Room. As I was paying my respects to Edward Laning's monumental W.P.A. mural series The Story of the Recorded Word, a guide said, "Don't miss seeing Milton and his daughters in the next room." She was referring to Mihály Munkácsy's 1877 oil painting The Blind Milton Dictating 'Paradise Lost' to His Daughters. If you intend to visit the library's exhibit, "John Milton at 400: A Life Beyond Life," it's worth a special trip from the first-floor gallery to the Edna Barnes Salomon Room on the third floor to see the Hungarian artist's rendering of the somberly-attired English poet and his three intimidated-looking daughters. Except for some color in the furnishings and in the youngest girl's rosy cheek, this is so dark a painting, you can almost feel your own sight dimming as you take it in. You can also imagine Rembrandt brooding over the painter's shoulder. Everything is muted and indistinct, Milton slumped in a chair, head down, legs apart, the murky atmosphere closer to hell's "palpable obscurity" than anything suggesting the presence of the "heavenly muse" whose aid he invokes for his "adventurous song./That with no middle flight intends to soar."

Manhattan Mix

After mingling with painted poets, writers, and financiers in the Salomon Room (Truman Capote in a jaunty hat staring hopefully at the indifferent Astors on the opposite wall), as well as actors like young Charles Coburn and his wife as Orlando and Rosalind in As You Like It, I stopped by the CUNY Graduate Center to find out more about the Rollins event, set to take place in a basement auditorium of the old B. Altman building whose Christmas displays used to be part of that great seasonal ritual of window gazing; then I walked through the digital dream world of Times Square whose monster displays are still haunted by the faces of pop culture past, Marilyn, Sinatra, Jimi Hendrix; then on up past the new Columbus Circle to my room in the YMCA building where J.D. Salinger went to school (but, like me, only for 9th grade) and where the Holden Caulfield wannabe who killed John Lennon stayed. Go west on 63rd and if you can get around Lincoln Center, you might find the site of Theolonius Monk's home and on the same street the Blue Note studios where he and Sonny Rollins and other jazz greats made records. On my way down Central Park West to hear Rollins talk about those days I passed the spot where I crossed paths with Jackie Gleason one morning on my way to school and said, without thinking, as if we were old pals, "Hi Jackie!" and he said, "Hiya, kid."

The Calassus Speaks

There he is then, Sonny Rollins, age 77, talking with Visions of Jazz author Giddins as free and easy as a man on his front porch before an SRO audience at the CUNY Center. Even to those of us who had seen him in his prime, it was nothing less than historic. If you've been in the thrall of such an imposing player — at his best, probably the most purely dynamic jazz musician of his, or maybe any, time — it's a pinch-yourself moment, to be present when the colossus comes out from behind his golden horn. With Giddins, his most enlightened and articulate admirer, leading the conversation, he opened up and gave the adoring crowd an hour and a half that in some ways, incredibly, was as good as a 90-minute performance that everyone there became part of, a whole theater full of sidemen and women.

Accomplished improvisers, like accomplished translators and actors, are expert impersonators (cadence, again, is everything) who translate into their playing the everything-that-lives-is-music world around them, including the sounds and sights in the moviehouses they frequented as kids. More than any other player, Sonny Rollins has been the translator of songlines from Tin Pan Alley to Hollywood, the whole ridiculous and sublime mass of phenomena passing across the country's movie screens in the so-called golden years. That's why it was exciting to hear him talk about his youthful encounters with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in Swing Time (their finest outing) and, still more exciting to hear him recalling the impact of the music in Bette Davis's The Letter: "There's a fantastic movie and it couldn't be done without music."

Now close your eyes and think about a 10-year-old kid from Harlem sitting in some dark moviehouse watching Warners' slick improvisation on Somerset Maugham exotica, dazzled by the relentless score that Bette Davis will kill and lie and die to (Max Steiner's version of the knocking at the door in Beethoven's Fifth), followed by the essence of oriental mystery, a sinuous, snake charmer's lament winding its way through the proto film-noir foliage only to be shattered by the sound of gunfire as Bette Davis steps out onto the verandah and empties her revolver into the body of her lover.

That night we heard the litany of his influences from the man himself — Fats Waller, Louis Jordan, Coleman Hawkins, and Lester Young — but who would have thought he'd bring Astaire and Rogers, Jerome Kern, Bette Davis, and Max Steiner into the conversation? Talk about a potpourri. Only in New York.

—Stuart Mitchner

"THE BLIND MILTON DICTATING 'PARADISE LOST' TO HIS DAUGHTERS": Mihály Munkácsy's oil painting is on permanent view in the Edna Barnes Salomon Room on the third floor of the New York Public Library and is worth a special trip before or after a visit to "John Milton at 400: A Life Beyond Life," which will continue through June 14 in the first floor gallery in the Humanities and Social Sciences Library. According to the brochure accompanying the exhibit Milton's influence touched "Charles Darwin, Helen Keller, Malcolm X, Mark Morris, and numerous heavy metal bands."

"Is it your hope that this year your bright child will achieve the success in school that reflects his or her ability?"

Holocaust Exhibit, "Memory Transformed," Coming to James A. Michener Art Museum

The concentration camp experience and the concept of both physical and emotional escape are evoked in pastel drawings and polychrome relief sculptures in the latest exhibition at the James A. Michener Art Museum in Doylestown. "Lilli Gettinger: Memory Transformed" will be on view from April 12 through August 3, and is the first exhibit of the late Princeton area resident's work in over a decade. Often compared to German Expressionist Max Beckman, Ms. Gettinger alludes to literature, music and the Bible in her art, which reflects the atmosphere of the Nazi era without depicting specific events.

"The value of Lilli Gettinger's work lies not only with her unique personal experience of the Holocaust: the life of a child in the caustic atmosphere of events that led to the horrific tragedy and its equally difficult aftermath," said Erika Jaeger-Smith, the Museum's Associate Curator of Exhibitions. "The real value of her work is the insight we have from watching a brave person, who happens to also be an artist, triumph over such a defining experience. Her artwork depicts this process and inadvertently gives us all hope."

Born in Berlin in 1920 to Polish Jewish parents, Ms. Gettinger was forced to leave her home when Adolf Hitler came to power in 1933. After she joined a militant Zionist group as a teenager, her parents sent her to boarding school in Florence in 1936. She always harbored a love for art as a child and while in Florence her artistic talents thrived. Here she also met her first husband, a German Jew, in 1938. The couple married in Switzerland and then fled to Norway after anti-Jewish laws were passed. The two Jewish refugees traveled throughout Europe and finally sought refuge in Haiti before moving to New York City.

Once settled in the United States, Ms. Gettinger studied under Cubist sculptor Alexander Archipenko. She would fill several drawing pads with sketches, but cast only a few sculptures while with him. From 1943 to 1948 she continued her education in drawing, stone carving, wood carving, and casting at the Corcoran School of Art in Washington, D.C. She worked under sculptor Heinz Warnecke and had her first solo exhibition in 1952.

Over the years, she also had solo exhibitions at the Robert Horn Gallery in New York City, and group exhibitions at the Baltimore Museum of Art in Baltimore, Maryland; The Watkins Gallery at American University, Washington, D.C.; Trenton City Museum, Trenton, New Jersey; and her last exhibit, held at the New Jersey Center for Visual Arts, in Summit.

Ms. Gettinger taught sculpture at the Museum of Modern Art in New York City for 15 years and at Artworks (formerly Princeton Art Association) for 10 years. She was also one of 92 historical witnesses invited by the German government to take part in a commemoration in Berlin 50 years after the Holocaust. Twenty of her autobiographical drawings were exhibited at the Schöneberg Museum in Berlin at the time. She and her second husband, Karl Hochschwender, settled in the Princeton region in 1979 and she lived here until her death in 1999. There will be a lecture by Mr. Hochschwender at the Museum in Doylestown on Tuesday, May 6, at 1 p.m. Entitled "Lilli Gettinger: Dream Journey from the Holocaust to Freedom," the lecture includes a slide show and discussion about the artist's life and work, including her sculpture and works on paper. The lecture is free with Museum admission, but advanced registration is required by calling (215) 340-9800.

Annual support for the Michener Art Museum is provided by The Pew Charitable Trusts, the Bucks County Commissioners and the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania Council on the Arts. The exhibit is sponsored by Mary Lou and Andrew Abruzzese of The Pineville Tavern.

"SENTINELS": Kathy Shumway Tunney's pastel is among the works in the New Jersey Pastel Painters Society's 2008 Members' Show, "Flora and Fauna in Pastel: Focus on New Jersey," which will run through May 9 in the Marie L. Matthews Gallery. The exhibition can be viewed during business days, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at D&R Greenway in the Johnson Education Center at One Preservation Place in Princeton. An artists' opening reception will be held on Friday, April 4, from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. All art is for sale, with 35 percent of the proceeds going to support D&R Greenway's land preservation and stewardship mission. Reservations are requested; visit www.drgreenway.org or call (609) 924-4646.

Watercolorists Unlimited Exhibits for Canal House
 Fifteen Princeton area painters, as members of Watercolorists Unlimited, will help the historic Blackwells Mills Canal House at 598 Canal Road, Somerset, to raise funds for repairs needed after the floods of Spring 2007 along the Delaware Raritan Canal.

Watercolorists Unlimited has volunteered to help with the needed monies through its Art Show & Sale at the Canal House on Saturday, April 12, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday, April 13, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. This will be the 17th anniversary of the group's annual Art Show & Sale, the majority of which were held at the Blackwells Mills Canal House.

The Blackwells Mills House Association receives no federal or state funds and is at this time in need of maintenance at the 1835 stone building which housed the Raritan Canal bridge tender's family until 1933 when the canal ceased operating, leaving the structure to deteriorate severely until saved by the Association in 1971.

"RED BARN, NEW JERSEY": This work being held by the artist, Joan Quackenbush, is among those that Watercolorists Unlimited will exhibit at its Art Show & Sale at the Canal House at 598 Canal Road, Somerset, on Saturday, April 12, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday, April 13, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. The group of Princeton area painters are helping the Blackwells Mills Canal House raise funds for repairs needed after the floods of Spring 2007.

CONDO PROJECT THREATENS PRINCETON NEIGHBORHOOD

Hillier Properties LLC plans to destroy three traditional houses to make way for a massive 14 unit condo project on historic Greenview Ave.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH IT?

- Disproportionate – a single, three-story building plan spans 4 lots.
- Isolates condo residents from the rest of the neighborhood:
  - Underground parking with interior elevator to residences.
  - Surrounded by a 6 ft. wall
- It's primarily luxury, 55+, "senior" condos in a middle class neighborhood, meaning:
  - Property taxes will rise disproportionate to the income level of existing residents

WHY YOU SHOULD CARE!

Because this will set a precedent for building multi-unit complexes in other Princeton neighborhoods.

APRIL 9
BORO HALL

WE CAN STOP IT!

Come to the zoning board meeting to say no to high-density development in the guise of "progress".

MUSIC REVIEW

New Jersey Symphony Orchestra Electrifies Princeton With New Concerto

The Trenton War Memorial has been renovated significantly in recent years, to the point that the New Jersey Symphony Orchestra now considers the hall one of its usual stops throughout the state during the course of the year. The hall is somewhat cavernous compared to the ensemble's other performing homes, but Friday night's concert by the orchestra indicated that the players are versatile enough to play to their hall, adjusting to maintain clarity and a clean sound.

Although the program was entitled "Järvi Conducts Brahms," the featured composer's music was not heard until the second half of the concert, and the key piece of the evening seemed to be the world premiere of Darryl Kublan's 3-2-1 for Electric and Acoustic Violin and Orchestra, conducted by Orchestra Music Director Neeme Järvi. This three-movement concerto, composed by a member of the orchestra's violin section, showcased concertmaster Eric Wyrick as soloist playing on both acoustic and electric instruments. The electric violin can produce a similar sound to its acoustic sibling, but with the addition of electronics activated by a pedal board, the instrument produces a wide variety of musical sounds ranging from organ-like tones to those of an electric guitar with echo.

Mr. Wyrick moved easily between acoustic and electric instruments throughout the work, playing on his regular 1737 Guarneri acoustic violin and an electric instrument resembling a violin without the sound chamber. Mr. Kublan conceived this piece from an article in Scientific American, and seems to have been inspired by both music from film and the great electric guitarists of the rock world. The number "3" was critical throughout the concerto, with themes comprised of three motives, and motives comprised of three notes. The contrast between acoustic and electric violins was clearly a musical goal of the work.

Both acoustic and electric violin blended in with the orchestra, and Mr. Kublan achieved some interesting instrumental effects by pairing the electric violin (played with double-stops and parallel tones) with the harp, played by Lise Nadeau Harman. Flutist Bart Feller and cellist Stephan Fang joined soloist Wyrick on the acoustic violin in the second movement, "Zeno's Paradox," and a very mellow musical atmosphere resulted from the addition of the viola section to this trio of instruments. A combination of harp and piccolo against the strings created another intriguing musical palette, and the ability to hear the pizzicato cello from the back of the balcony also served as a credit to the War Memorial itself.

The concert lived up to its title name in the second half as Maestro Järvi led the orchestra in Johannes Brahms's Symphony No. 3. The orchestral sound was clean in this symphony, with especially crisp winds. The first movement rolled along through the dramatic and familiar opening, and after the intense contemporary violin concerto, the audience could relax through this more traditional work. Solo flute, clarinet, and bassoon cleanly opened the second movement andante, and Maestro Järvi made a particular effort to bring the sound way down, enabling the solos to be heard. A rich cello theme and effective horn solo (played by Lucinda Lewis) marked the third movement poco allegretto, and the Brahms continued through the encore of one of the composer's Hungarian Dances.

The audience reaction to the Kublan piece was significantly more enthusiastic than to that of the Brahms, indicating not that there was something wrong with the Brahms, but that Princeton audiences are open to new musical experiences and expect nothing less from the orchestra than clean playing on the standard repertoire. Coming on the heels of the Philadelphia Orchestra's premiere of Jennifer Higdon's Concerto 4-3, another avant-garde concerto involving violin, it seems that Mr. Kublan's piece is part of an interesting trend. The key will be whether it will have a life past its composer's resident orchestra.

—Nancy Plum

Dryden Ensemble Closing Year with Mozart Program

The Dryden Ensemble will mark the end of its 2007-08 season with an all-Mozart concert on Friday, April 18 at 8 p.m. at Trinity Church, and on Saturday, April 19 at 7:30 p.m. at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, 84 East Oakland Avenue, in Doylestown, Pa. The concert will celebrate the life of the Ensemble's former board member and friend, Mardi Considine.

In a departure from the Ensemble's usual Baroque repertoire, the program will move through the 18th century to three chamber works by Mozart. The Quartet for Strings in F Major was written during a visit to Vienna in 1773, and includes a slow movement in F minor and a brilliant fugal finale. The Quintet for Strings in B-flat Major, also composed in 1773 in Salzburg, moves beyond any string quartets of its time. The Quintet in C Minor, which Mozart arranged from an earlier serenade for winds, will be performed on a copy of a late 18th-century oboe with violin, two violas, and violoncello.

Performing on period instruments, the members of the Dryden Ensemble are Jane McKinley, oboe; Rachel Evans and Vita Wallace, violins; Jessica Troy and Mark Zaki, violas; and Lisa Terry, violoncello.

2 Early Music Ensembles To Perform at All Saints'

Two of America's outstanding early music ensembles, Artek and Piffaro, will present a joint program of German early Baroque music this Friday, April 4 at All Saints' Church, 16 All Saints' Road, at 8 p.m. The program, entitled "Music of Schütz, Scheidt, Schein and Praetorius," will include music from Dresden, Halle, and Wolfenbüttel in 16th and 17th century Germany.

Artek, directed by Gwendolyn Toth, has been in existence for over 20 years, earning a reputation as America's premier ensemble in the performance of 17th century Italian and German music. The ensemble gained international recognition for its recording of Monteverdi's opera L'Orfeo in 1995, and toured with the Mark Morris Dance Group throughout the U.S., UK, and Europe from 1997 to 2002. Its musical theater show, I'll Never See the Stars Again, with madrigals by Monteverdi and post-modern staging, ran in New York City in 2002 and 2003 and at the Edinburgh Fringe Festival in 2005.

Piffaro, founded in 1980, performs music of the late Medieval and Renaissance periods with a varied collection of early wind instruments, plucked strings, and percussion. Modeled after the official civic, chapel, and court bands of the 14th to early 17th centuries, Piffaro has pursued the instruments and music of the peasantry and of rustic life as well, often combining the styles. The group tours regularly throughout the United States, and has recorded for Newport Classics and Deutsche Grammophon's Archiv Produktion.

MOZART PERFORMERS: The Dryden Ensemble will conclude its 2007-08 season with two all-Mozart concerts later this month in Princeton and Doylestown, Pa. The musicians are, in front from left, Jessica Troy and Vita Wallace, and standing, Lisa Terry, Mark Zaki, Rachel Evans, and Jane McKinley. The Princeton concert will be Friday, April 18 at 8 p.m. at Trinity Church.

Composers Heinrich Schütz (1585-1672), Samuel Scheidt (1587-1653), Johann Herman Schein (1586-1630), and Hieronymus Praetorius (1560-1629) were the most celebrated German composers of their era. The program will include large polychoral works for 13 voices of Schütz as well as smaller works mixing voices and instruments.

Tickets are $30 and $20, with $10 discounts for seniors, and may be purchased in advance by calling (212) 967-9157 or by visiting www.artkearlymusic.org. Tickets will also be available at the door.

For directions to All Saints' Church, visit www.allsaints.org.

Scottish Music Scheduled By Folk Music Society

The Princeton Folk Music Society will present a concert of traditional, contemporary, and original Scottish folk music by Enoch Kent at 8:15 p.m. on Friday, April 18 at Christ Congregation Church, 50 Walnut Lane.

Mr. Kent is considered one of the founding figures of the Scottish folk music revival. After graduating from the Glasgow School of Art, he formed the traditional Scottish group The Relvers, which became the first group to play traditional Scottish folk songs on national television. The band's five shows and interest in promoting traditional music provided the foundation for the renaissance of Scottish folk music that took place in the 1950s and 1960s. Later, after moving to London, Mr. Kent kept this music alive with his folk band The Exiles, with fellow Scotsmen Gordon MacCulloch and Bobby Campbell, recording two LPs for Topic Records.

Mr. Kent's songwriting craft was further developed through The Singers Club, which he co-founded with the renowned folksingers A. L. Lloyd, Ewan MacColl, and Peggy Seeger. Since immigrating to Canada in the 1960s, he has performed in many folk clubs and festivals across the country. After a 36-year recording hiatus, at the age of 70, he returned to studio recording and released four CDs, in the process earning rave reviews, extensive airplay, and tour opportunities across Canada, the U.S., UK, and Germany.

Rich Warren, in reviewing one of the CDs for Sing Out! magazine, said, "Picking outstanding performances on this CD presents the same challenge as choosing just a few chocolates from a Godiva assortment."

Admission will be $15 for the general public, $10 for members of the Folk Music Society and affiliated organizations, and $3 for children 11 and under.

Princeton Symphony Plans
Free Flute Master Classes

The Princeton Symphony Orchestra education program BRAVO! will present a flute master class, led by PSO's principal flutist Jayn Rosenfeld, on Saturday, April 19 from 3 to 5 p.m. at the Princeton Public Library. Four flutists from area high schools will perform advanced classical repertoire, while Ms. Rosenfeld coaches and provides interpretive guidance.

Princeton High School senior John Yi will perform Sergei Prokofiev's Sonata in D Major; Kate Wiles, a junior from Stuart Country Day School, will perform Syrinx by Claude Debussy; Lawrenceville senior Mythiliyer will perform the Concerto for Flute and Orchestra by Jacques Francois Antoine Ibert, and Hopewell Valley High School freshman Nicole Giermasinski will perform Molique's Concerto in D Minor, Op. 69.

The master class series offers students an opportunity to learn more about the technical approach and interpretive priorities of an artist. The BRAVO! series seeks to pair high school musicians from central New Jersey with a major performance artist. Teachers are selected from PSO's roster of musicians or from PSO's visiting solo artists.

Ms. Rosenfeld is one of the leading flutists of her generation. Presently flutist and executive director of The New York New Music Ensemble, with whom she has played for 29 years, she also performs with the ISCM Ensemble, the Richardson Players at Princeton University, and the Washington Square Contemporary Music Society. She has been the principal flutist of the Princeton Symphony Orchestra since its inception, and performs and coaches during the summer at the Manchester Music Festival in Vermont.

Ms. Rosenfeld teaches at the Juilliard School in the Music Advancement Program, at Princeton University, and at Greenwich House Music School where she gives a flute chamber music class. Her many recordings include more than 50 works of contemporary chamber music.

While this year's class is particularly relevant to flute players, all music students and teachers may benefit from Ms. Rosenfeld's insights and coaching. The public is invited to observe the class. A reception with refreshments for the artists and audience will immediately follow the class. For reservations or more information, call (609) 497-0020.

Music of French Baroque On Westminster Program

The Kaleidoscope Chamber Series of Westminster Conservatory will present "Une Affaire Française," a program of music from the French Baroque performed on historic instruments, this Sunday, April 6 at 3 p.m. The recital will take place in Gill Memorial Chapel on the Lawrenceville campus of Rider University.

The Kaleidoscope Chamber Series consists of four concerts performed by faculty from Westminster Conservatory, the community music school of Westminster Choir College. The series places emphasis on repertoire that combines voice and different instrumental families.

The program will include works for flute, oboe, voice, harpsichord, recorder, and strings. The performers will be Danielle Sinclair and Sarah Materniak, soprano; Timothy Urban, baritone and recorder; Christa Pehl and Jill Crawford, traverso; Melissa Bohl, Baroque oboe; Marjorie Selden, Baroque violin; Melissa Burton Anderson, Baroque 'cello; and Min-ju Lee and Janet Palumbo, harpsichord.

Admission will be $10 for adults and $5 for students and seniors. For tickets, or for more information on the Kaleidoscope Chamber Series, call the Choir College box office at (609) 921-2663.

Gill Memorial Chapel is located on the campus of Rider University at 2083 Lawrenceville Road in Lawrenceville.

Coalition for Peace Action Offering Guthrie Tickets

The Princeton-based Coalition for Peace Action has a limited number of tickets available for a solo acoustic concert by Arlo Guthrie scheduled for 7:30 p.m. on Friday, May 9 at McCarter Theatre.

Tickets through McCarter Theatre are sold out. CFPA's tickets, therefore, are the only ones still available.

CFPA is selling the tickets, which include a reception at McCarter following the Concert, for $100 per person ($50 tax deductible) as a fundraiser. Those who already have tickets and wish to attend the reception may do so for a fee of $50 ($40 tax deductible) per person.

According to the Rev. Robert Moore, CFPA's Executive Director, the remaining tickets are selling quickly. Tickets may be ordered via CFPA's web site, www.peacecoalition.org, or by calling the CFPA office at (609) 924-5022 weekdays between 9:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Trinity Church to Host Concert by Three Choirs

England's Winchester College Chapel boys' choir will sing at Trinity Church, 33 Mercer Street, on Friday, April 11 at 7:30 p.m., in a concert with members of the Trinity Choirs and Lux, the collegiate choir of the Episcopal Church at Princeton University.

The choirs, with more than 70 voices, will sing a repertoire of the English Cathedral school including pieces by Sir William Walton, the French composer Jean Langlais, and Thomas Tallis. Malcolm Archer of Winchester College will direct.

Tickets range from $300 for six reserved seats in a designated row to $150 for four reserved seats or $100 for two, to general admission at $20 or $10 for students. They may be purchased weekdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the church office. General admission tickets may be purchased at the door.

The Winchester College Chapel Choir will also sing at the 11:15 a.m. service on Sunday, April 13 at Trinity Church.

SINGERS SOUGHT: The Hopewell Valley Youth Chorale, pictured here performing a January concert at the Unitarian Universalist Church at Washington Crossing, is seeking new choristers for its 2008-09 season. Auditions will be held on April 26 and May 10. Those interested in auditioning are asked to call (609) 651-5474 for more information.

"Magic Moments" Concert Returning to State Theatre

New Brunswick's State Theatre will present Richard Nader's Magic Moments to Remember concert on Saturday, April 26 at 8 p.m. The concert performers will be The Drifters, featuring Charlie Thomas; Gene Chandler, best known for "Duke of Earl"; Kenny Vance and The Planotones; and Johnnie and Joe ("Over the Mountain").

Mr. Thomas is a member of the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and the voice on the Drifter hits. Rolling Stone Magazine ranked The Drifters in the 100 Greatest Artists of All Time. The group's 16 Top 40 hits include "There Goes My Baby," "Under The Boardwalk," and "Save The Last Dance For Me."

Between 1962 and 1970 Gene Chandler had six songs, including one gold record, in the top 40. "Duke of Earl" sold a million copies and was at Number 1 for three weeks. A singer, songwriter, and producer, Mr. Chandler still delights audiences today in his top hat and cape.

A co-founder of Jay & The Americans, Kenny Vance left the band in 1972 and later served as musical director on Saturday Night Live. The Planotones were created in 1978 for the movie American Hot Wax. Mr. Vance reformed the group in 1992.

The R&B duo Johnnie and Joe, featuring Joe Rivers, is best known for its doo-wop ballads, notably "Over The Mountain, Across The Sea," "I'll Be Spinning," and "My Baby's Gone, On, On."

Tickets range from $25 to $55, with group, college student, and senior discounts available. To order, call the State Theatre box office at (732) 246-7469, or visit www.StateTheatreNJ.org.

MONTGOMERY

ALZHEIMER'S PATIENTS IN NEED OF EYE EXAMS

New research shows that one in three Alzheimer's patients living in nursing homes is not getting his or her vision corrected so that he or she can see clearly. As a result, these patients may not be getting the visual stimulation needed to help stave off their dementia. These patients may then become sensory deprived, and, in essence, are shut off from a world that they may otherwise contact through face-to-face interactions or TV. The first step in combating this problem is to make sure that seniors with signs of dementia have their vision tested. Once this is done and they are prescribed the necessary lenses, glasses should be clearly marked so that they will be worn.

Alzheimer's disease is a condition in which brain cells deteriorate and die. The brain loses the ability to process new information or store and retrieve memories. Alzheimer's patients become easily confused and disoriented, so it is important that their vision is protected. At MONTGOMERY EYE CARE, we carry a wide selection of durable and flexible eyewear for a variety of needs. Call us at 609-279-0005 to schedule an eye exam for a loved one. We are located at Montgomery Center at 1325 Rt. 206. Office hours are Mon 10-8; Tues 10-5; Wed, Thurs 10-7; Fri 10-6, and Sat 9-3.

The Pillowman

Gruesome Murders and Torturous Tales Highlight "The Pillowman" In Theatre Intime Revival of McDonagh's Recent Broadway Hit

More than 400 years after Shakespeare's tragic "pillowman" Othello first took Desdemona's life in their bedroom by smothering her with a pillow, Irish playwright Martin McDonagh created The Pillowman (2003), a contemporary horror story with more than one pillow-murder of its own.

The Pillowman, however, winner of the Laurence Olivier Award for best new play during its initial run in London and nominated for a Tony Award for best play on Broadway in 2005, is an entirely different genre than Shakespeare's classic tragedy. Mr. McDonagh's creation, in the same curious vein as his Tony-nominated The Beauty Queen of Leenane (1996) and The Lieutenant of Inishmore (2001), can perhaps best be described as black comedy — careening unexpectedly between horror and farce, replete with violence, with an occasional sprinkling of social commentary.

The Pillowman is the story of the police interrogations of a short story writer and his mentally defective brother, who are arrested in connection with the murders of several local children. The play, currently in a Theatre Intime production on the Princeton University campus, concerns the subjects of child abuse and infanticide; the effects — creative and destructive — of violence on the developing child's psyche; state-sanctioned violence in the form of police torture; horror and humor and the peculiar relationship between the two; and the creative mind and its affinities with violence and perversion.

But, more essentially, The Pillowman is a play in celebration of the powers of storytelling and an exploration of the nature and purposes of narrative art. As the main character Katurian (Shawn Fennell) responds to the harsh interrogations of Police Detective Tupolski (Max Rosmarin) and his assistant Detective Ariel (Kut Adogan), Katurian pleads innocence ("Are you trying to say I shouldn't write stories with child-killings in them because in the real world there are child-killings?") and repeatedly asserts the value and importance of his stories.

Katurian responds violently to the suggestion of his brother Michal (Damian Carrieri) that Katurian's hundreds of stories are "just paper." "If they came to me right now," Katurian declares, "and said, 'We're going to burn two out of the three of you — you, your brother, or your stories,' I'd have them burn you first, I'd have them burn me second, and I'd have it be the stories they saved."

For Mr. McDonagh, as for his writer-protagonist, it's the stories that take precedence — far beyond any of the troubling agh's work is replete have been omitted. The shocking subject matter, along with the coarse language, makes this show inadvisable for children. A great man once said, 'The first duty of a storyteller is to tell a story' ... that's what I do, I tell stories. No axe to grind, no anything to grind. No social anything whatsoever."

And, at the end, Katurian is willing, even eager, to give up his own life so long as his stories are saved for future publication.

The detective story of the interrogations of Katurian and his brother Michal and the case of the child murders are violent and the "Jesus Girl," who insists that she is the reincarnation of Christ and whose parents are determined to take her at her word and reenact the most grisly details of the crucifixion.

This material is as troubling and difficult to stage, as it is troubling and difficult for the audience. The Theatre Intime company is capable, energetic, and well rehearsed, but much of the carefully crafted interplay between humor and horror does not come across here. Under the direction of Princeton University sophomore Jac Mullen, the Intime production contains the appropriate sense of urgency, the dialogue flows and the pacing is brisk, but the characterizations are not always convincing and the evening falls a bit flat. These characters should be dangerous, violent, psychopathic, but little of the requisite sense of terror and less of McDonagh's broadly dark humor emerge here.

The simple, functional, appropriately austere set design by Julie Dickerson, with lighting by Laura Huchel, consists primarily of three paint-splattered blank walls, a table and two chairs, and a single light hanging overhead.

This Intime company (which also includes Katy Pinke, Rob Madole, Carolyn Edelstein, and Dan Posen, who are focused and effective in supporting roles) may not fully embody these extreme characters nor deliver the full force of the humor and gruesomeness here, but they deserve, and could definitely benefit from, a more substantial audience than the small handful of supporters who showed up on opening night.

In the Broadway production, which I saw almost three years ago, Jeff Goldblum and Zeljko Ivanek as the interrogators and Billy Crudup as the writer Katurian created an eerie aura of menace, sadism, and unpredictable brutality, while at the same time bringing out the comedy in this peculiar world and these bizarre characters. It is an odd, uncomfortable evening, and the script should be trimmed, but Mr. McDonagh is a gifted story-teller and a masterful creator of horrific humor.

—Donald Gilpin

TORTUROUS TALES: Short story writer Katurian (Shawn Fennell) awaits his interrogators in Theatre Intime's production of Martin McDonagh's "The Pillowman," at the Hamilton Murray Theater on the Princeton University campus through April 5.

Issues raised here, far beyond the value of the life of any character or human being.

Early in the play Katurian speaks for himself and the playwright when he declares, "I say keep your left-wing this, keep your right-wing that and tell me a ... story! [The harsh expletives with which McDon-agh's work is replete have been omitted. The shocking subject matter, along with the coarse language, makes this show inadvisable for children. A great man once said, 'The first duty of a storyteller is to tell a story' ... that's what I do, I tell stories. No axe to grind, no anything to grind. No social anything whatsoever."

"The Pillowman" runs for one more weekend, April 3-5 at 8 p.m. on Thursday and Friday and at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. on Saturday, in the Hamilton Murray Theater on the Princeton University campus. Call (609) 258-1742 or visit www.princeton.edu/tickets for tickets.

Free "John Brown's Body" This Week at Seminary

Princeton Theological Seminary's Department of Speech Communication in Ministry will present four performances of Stephen Vincent Benet's narrative epic John Brown's Body this week. Performances will be Thursday, April 3 through Saturday, April 5 at 8 p.m., and Sunday, April 6 at 3 p.m. in the Gambrell Room of Scheide Hall on the Seminary campus.

John Brown's Body is a narrative epic that won the Pulitzer Prize in 1929. In the poem, three families are buffeted by the Civil War. In the midst of all the fighting, imprisonment, and escape, the family members find solace and love in unexpected ways.

The poem has been adapted for the stage by director Robert Lanchester, the Seminary's assistant in speech. Seminary students make up the cast.

The production is open to the public and free of charge, but seats are limited and must be reserved in advance. For reservations and/or information, call Lois Haydu at (609) 497-7963.

Founded in 1812 as the first seminary established by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, Princeton Theological Seminary is the largest Presbyterian seminary in the country, with more than 700 students in seven graduate degree programs.

"Anything Goes" Coming To Princeton High School

Princeton High School's Spectacle Theater will present three performances of the Broadway classic Anything Goes next week at the Princeton High School Auditorium. Tickets, sold at the door, will be $12 for adults, $7 for students.

Performances will be

Wednesday, April 9 at 7:30 p.m. and Friday and Saturday, April 11 and 12, at 8 p.m.

Directed by Patricia Wray and professionally choreographed by Broadway dancer Michael Kubala, the Cole Porter musical suggests that when it comes to love, anything goes.

Determined to court the debutante Hope Harcourt (Angela Musliner '09), stock broker Billy Crocker (Ben Taub '09) stows away on an ocean liner, only to find that she is engaged to Lord Evelyn Oakleigh (John Yi '08). Meanwhile, New York's notorious evangelist Reno Sweeney (Rachel London '08) pairs up with Public Enemy Number 13, Moonface Martin (Evan Weiss '08) to help save the love between Billy and Hope.

Also in starring roles are Savannah Merceus '08 as Erma, Saumitra Sahi '09 as Elisha Whitney, and Caroline Black '08 as Evangeline Harcourt.

The show features such Cole Porter classics as "Easy to Love," and "Delovely."

Stop-Loss

Drama Examines Emotional Toll Exacted by Service in Iraq

After serving tours of duty in Afghanistan and Iraq, Staff Sergeant Brandon King (Ryan Phillippe), soon to be honorably discharged, returns from the Middle East as a decorated war hero and a welcoming parade. When he arrives in his hometown of Brazos, Texas, he is awarded a Purple Heart and the Bronze Star by his Senator (Josef Worrell) in the presence of his squad, family, and friends and neighbors.

Unfortunately, all the accolades and attention did not alleviate the emotional toll on his psyche caused by serving in two war zones. After all the hoopla has died down, King discovers that he is having flashbacks of hand-to-hand combat and is seeing the faces of the members of his company who were killed while under his command.

Unfortunately, his parents (Ciaran Hinds and Linda Emond), cannot help him cope with his case of post-traumatic stress disorder. However, he does have several sympathetic shoulders to lean on such as his best friend, Sergeant Steve Shriver (Channing Tatum) and other buddies from his squad, who try to help him make the challenging adjustment back to civilian life.

Prophetically, their commanding officer, Lieutenant Colonel Boot Miller (Timothy Oliphant), while dismissing his men after the parade and award ceremony, warns them not to drive drunk, physically abuse women, or consort with underage girls, which of course they promptly proceed to do while on furlough.

First, Tommy (Joseph Gordon Levitt) hits a telephone pole while driving drunk. Next, Steve digs a foxhole in his front yard to sleep in after inexplicably beating his girlfriend, Michelle (Abbie Cornish) and others get into similar situations.

Whether the film has a pacifist agenda or is trying to make a case for a return to the draft, Stop-Loss is a compelling movie which compassionately establishes that veterans of the Iraq conflict can have mental wounds which are just as disabling as physical ones. While we are empathizing with the returning soldiers who do not receive treatment for their psychological traumas, director Kimberly Peirce (Boys Don't Cry) ups the ante by having Brandon informed that he's just been stop-lossed, and must head back to the frontlines in Iraq because the military is short-handed.

He takes this news badly since he's already served his country and is making plans for the next phase of his life. Consulting his parents and pals proves to be no help since they feel he has no choice but to follow the orders of his superiors.

Instead of reporting back to the base, Brandon impulsively goes AWOL accompanied by his buddy's girl, Michelle, knowing full well that he's risking both a friendship and a dishonorable discharge. Searching for an avenue of escape to Canada or Mexico, the two descend into an underground world of army deserters that is inhabited by black market hustlers who make promises they probably do not intend to keep.

Will the combat hero really abandon the U.S. or will he decide to re-up for another tour of duty? Well scripted and convincingly executed, this raw thriller is made all the more riveting because you realize that similar events may be occurring all across America.

Excellent (★★★½). Rated R for graphic violence and pervasive profanity. Running time: 113 minutes. Studio: Paramount Pictures

AT THE CINEMA

21 (PG-13 for violence, sexuality and partial nudity). Vegas casino caper recalls the real-life exploits of a quintet of card-counting MIT students who, with the help of their math professor (Kevin Spacey), beat the house for millions in winnings. Cast includes Kate Bosworth, Laurence Fishburne, Jim Sturgess and Aaron Yoo.

10,000 B.C. (PG-13 for action violence). Peripatetic prehistoric adventure about a brave young warrior (Steven Strait) who leads a tight-knit band of brothers on an epic journey to the ends of the Earth to rescue the love of his life (Camilla Belle) from the clutches of the warlike tribe who kidnapped her during a raid of their village.

The Band's Visit (PG-13 for brief profanity). Cross-cultural comedy about the hijinks which ensue when an Egyptian police orchestra gets lost on its way to a concert in Israel and ends up stranded in a tiny town where everybody learns a touching lesson in tolerance. (In Arabic, Hebrew and English with subtitles)

The Bank Job (R for profanity, sexuality, nudity and violence). Jason Statham stars in this action thriller about a struggling car dealer duped by a fetching femme fatale (Saffron Burrows) with a hidden agenda into hatching a plan to burglarize a London bank's safe deposit boxes containing not only millions in cash and jewelry but a treasure trove of dirty secrets.

College Road Trip (G). Coming-of-age comedy about a high school student (Raven Symone) whose plans for a girls-only trip visiting prospective colleges are ruined when her overbearing, police chief father (Martin Lawrence) insists on accompanying her instead.

The Counterfeiters (R for sexuality, nudity, profanity, and violence). True World War II tale of survival, set in a Nazi concentration camp, about a master counterfeiter (Karl Markovics) forced to ply his trade to flood the market with the currency of the countries fighting Hitler and thereby devalue their money. In German with subtitles.

Drillbit Taylor (PG-13 for bullying, sexual references, profanity, crude humor, and partial nudity). Owen Wilson handles the title role in this revenge comedy as a down on his luck soldier of fortune hired by three freshmen (Troy Gentile, Nate Hartley, and David Dorfman) to protect them from the high school bully (Alex Frost).

Horton Hears a Wha (G). Jim Carrey provides the voiceover for the title character in this animated adaptation of the Dr. Seuss kiddie classic about an elephant determined to come to the assistance of the inhabitants of a tiny planet when he hears cries for help coming from a speck of dust floating through the air. Voice cast includes Steve Carrell, Carol Burnett, Jonah Hill, Jamie Pressly, SNL's Amy Poehler, Isla Fisher, Will Arnett and Seth Rogen.

Leatherheads (PG-13 for brief profanity). George Clooney directed and stars in this romantic comedy, set in 1925, as the owner/captain of a fledgling pro football franchise who finds himself competing with the decorated World War I hero (John Krasinski) he's just signed for the affections of a skeptical sports reporter (Renee Zellweger) covering the team.

Married Life (Unrated). Romantic triangle thriller, set in the Forties, revolving around a middle-aged adulterer (Chris Cooper) impatient to enjoy his 30 years-younger mistress (Rachel McAdams) who opts to murder rather than divorce his wife (Patricia Clarkson). With Pierce Brosnan as the pal with possibly less than honorable intentions.

Meet the Browns (PG-13 for profanity, violence, mature themes, sexual references, and drug use). Tyler Perry wrote, directed and reprises his cross-dressing role as Madea in this adaptation of his play about a single-mom (Angela Bassett) who moves her family from Chicago to Georgia for the funeral of the father she never met. Cast includes Rick Fox, Frankie Faison, Jenifer Lewis, and Tamela and David Mann.

Miss Pettigrew Lives for a Day (PG-13 for sexual innuendo and partial nudity). Frances McDormand stars in the title role of this romantic comedy, adapted from Winifred Watson's 1938 novel of the same name, about an unfairly-fired British nanny who tries a new line of work as the social secretary of an American starlet (Amy Adams).

Never Back Down (PG-13 for mature themes, intense violence, profanity, teen partying and premarital sexuality). Overcoming-the-odds drama, set in Orlando, stars Sean Faris as the hot-headed new kid in town who starts studying mixed martial arts after being beaten up by a bully (Cam Gigandet) for flirting with his girlfriend (Amber Heard) at a party. Karate Kid-inspired adventure features Djimon Hounsou in the Mr. Miyagi role as the lad's mild-mannered mentor.

Nim's Island (PG for mild action and brief epithets). Fanciful family adventure about a young girl (Abigail Breslin) with an active imagination who enlists the assistance of her favorite author (Jodie Foster) and fictional hero (Gerard Butler) in finding her father, a scientist who has gone missing on a magical island.

Priceless (PG-13 for nudity and sexuality). Audrey Tautou stars in this French farce as a scheming gold digger in search of a wealthy sugar daddy who seduces a shy bartender (Gad Elmaleh), mistakenly believing him to be a multi-millionaire. (In French with subtitles.)

The Ruins (R for nudity, sexuality, profanity, graphic violence and gruesome images). Hardcore horror flick about four Americans friends (Jena Malone, Shawn Ashmore, Jonathan Tucker and Laura Ramsey) vacationing in Cancun who are persuaded by a German tourist (Joe Anderson) to join in the search for his missing brother amidst the ruins of an archaeological dig located in a remote Mexican jungle.

Run, Fatboy, Run (PG-13 for crude humor, profanity, sexuality, nudity and smoking). David Schwimmer makes an impressive directorial debut with this romantic comedy about a chubby loser (Simon Pegg) looking for a second chance to impress the ex-fiancée (Thandie Newton) he'd abandoned at the altar on their wedding day five years ago after getting cold feet because she was pregnant. Supporting cast includes Hank Azaria, Harish Patel and India de Beaufort.

Shutter (PG-13 for profanity, sexuality, terror, and disturbing images). English language remake of the Thai horror film of the same name about newlyweds (Joshua Jackson and Rachael Taylor) honeymooning in Tokyo who start discovering disturbing images in the photographs they take after their car hits a girl in a fatal traffic accident on Mt. Fuji.

Stop-Loss (R for graphic violence and pervasive profanity). Iraq War saga about the emotional toll exacted on an honorably-discharged veteran (Ryan Phillippe) and his family when he is ordered by the Army to return to Baghdad for another tour of duty. With Rob Brown, Channing Tatum and Ciaran Hinds.

Superhero Movie (PG-13 for profanity, sexuality, crude humor, slapstick violence and drug references). Leslie Nielsen, Tracy Morgan and Pamela Anderson are among the large ensemble cast in this parody of the superhero genre which satirizes a host of comic book screen adaptations including Fantastic Four, X-Men, Spider-Man and Batman.

Vantage Point (PG-13 for intense violence, disturbing images and brief profanity). Political potboiler examines an attempted assassination of the President of the United States (William Hurt) from the varying perspectives of eight eyewitnesses. Ensemble cast includes Forest Whitaker, Dennis Quaid, Sigourney Weaver, Zoe Saldana, Matthew Fox, Eduardo Noriega, Richard T. Jones and Bruce McGill.

PU Men's Hockey Falls in NCAA Opener But Proved It Belonged With the Big Boys

Guy Gadowsky acknowledges that his Princeton University men's hockey team was a bit overwhelmed at first by the atmosphere at the ECAC Hockey championships two weekends ago at the Times Union Center in Albany, N.Y.

"In the first half of the game Friday night, everybody was awed by the surroundings and it affected our play," said Princeton head coach Gadowsky. "We were tight and a bit tentative."

The Tigers ultimately overcame those jitters, beating Colgate 3-0 in that semifinal game Friday night and then topping Harvard 4-1 a night later in the ECACH title game.

The win gave Princeton its first ECACH crown since 1997-98 and qualified it for the NCAA tournament.

Heading out to the Midwest Regional in Madison, Wis. last weekend, the fourth-seeded Tigers drew a tough assignment, getting matched against No. 1 North Dakota, one of the storied programs in college hockey with 17 NCAA Final 4s in its resume.

As Princeton landed in Madison after enjoying a special charter flight, Gadowsky liked the vibes he was getting from his players.

"Going through that experience in Albany really helped us," said Gadowsky.

"The Kohl Center in Madison is a beautiful venue and the guys had a great time with the hoopla. Once the puck dropped, they were ready to play."

The fourth-year coach, though, wasn't 100 percent sure his team was ready for the challenge posed by North Dakota, the third-ranked team in the country.

"I think part of the question for me was how do we stack up against North Dakota," said Gadowsky. "Over the last 25 games, they were the best team in the country."

It didn't take long for Gadowsky to get an affirmative answer to the question in his mind as Princeton skated with the Fighting Sioux all over the ice last Saturday. The Tigers outshot North Dakota 10-7 but found themselves trailing 1-0 on a power play goal by Andrew Kozek.

Looking to overcome that deficit, the Tigers found another gear in the second period, repeatedly peppering North Dakota goalie J.P. Lamoureux, generating a 15-5 edge in shots.

Unfortunately for Princeton, North Dakota was more efficient with its opportunities as Ryan Duncan scored to give the Fighting Sioux a 2-0 lead going into the third period.

Over the last 20 minutes, the Tigers kept pressing the issue but tournament-tested North Dakota pulled away to a 5-1 victory.

In assessing the setback which left Princeton with a final record of 21-14, Gadowsky believed his team proved that it belonged on the same ice with the elite of the college game.

"There was no doubt that we deserved to be there and that we could play with them," said Gadowsky, who got a late goal from Cam MacIntyre on an afternoon which saw his team end with a 39-18 edge in shots.

"I think that on the 5-on-5, we played as well as they did. We just didn't capitalize on the opportunities that we had. If a couple of calls had gone our way, things could have been different."

The Tigers also impressed Gadowsky with their cool demeanor as they battled the Fighting Sioux.

"It was business, this team has a business-like sense about it," said Gadowsky.

"It was hard to be totally loose, they knew what this was about and what was going on."

Gadowsky tipped his hat to North Dakota, who went on to edge host Wisconsin 3-2 in overtime in the regional final to qualify for its fourth straight Final Four and 18th overall.

"They had incredible skills; the first goal on the power play was as perfect a shot as you'll see," said Gadowsky.

"We looked at the film, Brad Schroeder was in the right place and Zane [Kalemba] had the right angle. Kozek just made a great shot, you have to give him credit for that. Duncan was last year's Hobey Baker Trophy winner and he had two goals."

In the team's post-game locker room meeting, the emotions overflowed as the players reflected on a great run which saw the Tigers set a program record for most wins in a season.

"A number of the players spoke to the seniors," recalled Gadowsky, whose core of seniors included captain Mike Moore, Rhodes Scholar Landis Stankievich, alternate captain Kyle Hagel, Keith Shattenkirk, and Erik Pridham.

"Some of the seniors talked about how much they enjoyed playing at Princeton and how they wish they had more games."

TAKING THEIR SHOT: Princeton University men's hockey forward Mark Magnowski fires a shot during Princeton's playoff run. Last Saturday, Magnowski and his teammates on fourth-seeded Princeton outshot top-seeded North Dakota 39-18 in the opening round of the NCAA Midwest Regional but came up short in falling 5-1 to the Fighting Sioux. (Photo by Bill Allen/NJ SportAction)

It's a very emotional thing for the seniors. It's their last game at Princeton, a place that will mean so much to them over the years."

For Gadowsky, the emotions were still raw after a game he thought should have gone differently.

"To be honest, I'm still a little mad because of how it happened," acknowledged Gadowsky. "I wish we could have played another game. I think we played with them and we deserved a better fate."

With a core of superb players coming back including the ECACH and Ivy League Player of the Year Lee Jubinville, All-Ivy forward Brett Wilson, All-Ivy goalie Kalemba, the high-scoring MacIntyre, and freshman stars Mike Kramer, Matt Arhontas, and Kevin Lohry, the Tigers should be looking at a good fate in the future.

"They have good examples to follow," said Gadowsky, who now has a 54-68-9 record in his Princeton tenure.

"It will be a different attitude; when you reach some good things you haven't, you know how to do it. It was a great year of firsts, the most wins, the first ECACH title in a decade but it also may have had a last, the last time a Rhodes Scholar scores the winning goal in a championship game."

But with the success experienced by the Tigers this winter, it looks like there may be more championship games in the program's future.

—Bill Alden

STAND-UP GUY: Princeton University men's hockey coach Guy Gadowsky watches the action during his team's run to the ECAC Hockey championship. Last Saturday, Princeton's superb season ended with a 5-1 loss to North Dakota in the opening round of the NCAA Midwest Regional. Princeton ended the year at 21-14, setting a program record for victories as it won its first ECACH title since the 1997-98 season.

With Drumm Hitting the Right Notes, No. 2 PU Women's Lax Routs Cornell

Lizzy Drumm reached a comfort level with her teammates on the Princeton University women's lacrosse team long before she made her debut on the field this spring.

The gifted freshman attacker was impressed by the way the Princeton veterans rolled out the welcome mat for her last fall.

"At the beginning of the year in September at captains' practice and then coming out and playing pickup, they definitely helped me become part of the team and learn the offense," said Drumm.

"Amo [senior attacker Ashley Amo and Cas [junior attacker Christine Casaceli] and me all work really well together. We just look for each other, there is that connection on the field."

Last Saturday, Drumm was at the receiving end of some key connections as she scored a career-high five goals to help second-ranked Princeton rout Cornell 19-10 in its Ivy League opener and improve to 7-0 on the season.

While the final score was lopsided, it took Princeton a while to get going as Cornell held a 1-0 lead 11 minutes into the first half. Drumm, however, broke the Princeton drought scoring two goals in a 30-second stretch as the Tigers took the lead and proceeded to build a 10-3 halftime lead.

In Drumm's view, Princeton took things to a higher level in its 10-2 outburst over the last part of the first half.

"I think the last 18 minutes of the first half were some of the best minutes we have played so far this season," said Drumm, who also got an assist on the day and now has 16 points on the season with 12 goals and four assists.

"I think we were put in our place a little bit after that 1st goal. We definitely knew that we had to step it up and come back with a bunch of goals. We went on a run."

Drumm's run against Cornell was helped by the confidence she gained a week earlier from scoring two goals and getting the assist on the game-winning score in Princeton's 8-7 win over then-second-ranked Virginia.

"Playing such a big team as UVa and being a freshman, it was nice to have a good game," said Drumm. "It gave me confidence. I think it helped me with this game."

The game against Cornell was key as Princeton wanted to make a statement in its league opener.

"No matter what the other teams are ranked, there are still gunning for you just because we are Princeton and we have a tradition of being the Ivy League champions," said Drumm.

"I think it is important, especially this year since we didn't win last year. To regain that title, that's definitely the main focus right now of our team."

Princeton head coach Chris Sailer liked the focus her veteran performers are showing on offense.

"A lot of the people in that 7-man offensive group are juniors and seniors now," said Sailer, who got four goals from senior star Katie Lewis-Lamonia with juniors Holly McGarvie and Kristin Schwab adding three apiece and Casaceli chipping in two.

"They have been with each other, they know each other, they look for each other. They are really an unselfish team. They get excited to set each other up and see each other make great plays."

The Tiger veterans were excited to welcome Drumm into the fold. "They have taken her under their wing since she got here," said Sailer.

"I think Amo and Lizzy have a really special relationship, they both play around the crease a lot and they look for each other. From day one, they have been working with her outside practice, getting her involved and boosting up her confidence. They are thankful for the kind of player she is and that she is here. It was open arms, come with us, play with us."

With Princeton up to No. 2 in the national rankings, Sailer has the feeling that her team can play with anybody.

"We talked about what that means and what it doesn't mean," said Sailer, who has guided Princeton to three national crowns in her 22-season tenure at Princeton.

"The ranking that matters is the one at the end of the season. Right now it has given a lot of our competition an extra incentive to try and knock us down but we believe that we have earned it. We've played well and we're going to try to use it to our advantage. We have worked real hard to get here and we are not going to give it up easily."

Sailer knows that it is not going to be easy to regain the Ivy crown that it lost to Penn last spring.

"The Ivy League is very, very competitive, you can't take anybody for granted," said Sailer, whose team hosts No. 13 Yale (7-3 overall, 2-1 Ivy) on April 5 in a crucial league contest.

"I told the kids they don't care what your record is or what your ranking is, they just want to come in and beat Princeton. I think you could see that at the beginning of the game — the energy that Cornell started off with. I think it was really good for us to experience that and know that what I'm telling them is really true."

Drumm, for her part, thinks that Princeton's balance will make it hard for those Ivy foes to knock off the Tigers.

"I think it's better to play on that kind of team instead of one with just one or two superstars because you are getting involved," said Drumm.

"It's fun to be out there, setting up your teammates, fun to watch them score those big goals. I think it makes it a lot harder for our opponents to guard our attack because they are not necessarily focusing on one player. It's definitely a positive for us, having so many people being able to score."

And it's definitely a huge positive for Princeton to have a freshman star like Drumm contributing to that attack.

PU Men's Lacrosse Produces Fast Start But Gets Sloppy in 11-8 Win Over Yale

Plagued by slow starts this spring, the Princeton University men's lacrosse team fine-tuned its pre-game routine before its Ivy League opening clash against visiting Yale.

"We came out sooner, we did some 6-on-6 and did a lot of situations to get the sweat on a bit," said senior co-captain and star defenseman Dan Coccoziello. "We wanted to come out and start the game with more energy."

The extended warm-up had the desired effect as Princeton jumped out to a 4-2 lead after the first quarter and built its advantage to 6-3 by halftime.

The Tigers also came out strong after the intermission, outscoring Yale 2-0 in the third period to take an 8-3 into the final quarter.

But displaying the inconsistency that has kept it from being a Top Ten team, Princeton surrendered three goals in the first 2:24 of the fourth. The Tigers responded with three unanswered goals to take an 11-6 lead and then held on for a 11-8 win as they improved to 4-3 on the season.

Coccoziello saw progress as the win over Yale gave Princeton its first two-game winning streak of the season.

"We came out and we jumped on them; I thought that was big," said the burly 6'0, 225-pound Coccoziello, a second-team All-American the last two seasons.

"Coming out after halftime, I thought we played well too. We had a lapse in the fourth quarter."

While Coccoziello was encouraged by Princeton's overall performance, he knows the Tigers have to tighten things up.

"Guys need to be focused," asserted Coccoziello. "When we are killing the clock, we have to have that killer mentality and put teams away."

As one of the team's captains, Coccoziello is looking to help instill that focus during the week.

"It's all about practice, coming out Monday through Friday and getting the guys going," said Coccoziello.

"We have to bring that energy into the game. When Saturday hits, your emotions get going and everything will come together."

After having played through an injured foot last season, things are better on Saturdays for Coccoziello this season.

"I rested it all summer and all fall," said Coccoziello. "I got on the bike, did a lot of cross training. Coming out on Saturdays now, it feels fresh."

Coccoziello was happy to see the Tigers come out hard Saturday in its league opener, acknowledging that 14th-ranked Princeton faces a battle as it looks to knock No. 8 Cornell from its perch atop the league.

"The first Ivy League game is huge, we wanted to get off to a good start," said Coccoziello. "With the way the Ivy League is this year, Yale, Harvard, Penn, and Cornell are all good teams. The league games are all big."

Princeton head coach Bill Tierney thought his team raised its intensity level as it started Ivy play.

"I think we came with a lot of emotion which we needed to," said Tierney.

"But at the end, we stopped playing with our brains. When we do that, a good team like Yale is going to get there. We have to learn to play with our bodies, our hearts, and our brains. I think today, we had two-thirds."

In Tierney's view, he has been getting everything from Coccoziello all season long.

"This is his best year by far and he's been fabulous all the other three years," said Tierney.

"He's become more active, he wants a more active role. He's asked us to bump him up to the midfield a little bit. He gets to go after the ball, get some shots. When he's into it like that, he plays better as well."

Still, Tierney knows that his team has to play better for 60 minutes, making it clear that the team's sloppy fourth quarter stuck in his craw.

"I was very frustrated because we had the game under control," said Tierney, who got two goals apiece from Bob Schneider, Tommy Davis, Jack McBride, and Mark Kovler, with Scott MacKenzie, Alex Haynie, and Rich Sgalardi chipping in one each. "I think we were up by five, it felt like OK as long as we play steady, maybe they get one more."

The coach was disappointed by his team's tendency this season to surrender extended runs.

"We have those little spurts," said Tierney, who acknowledged that senior goalie Alex Hewitt bailed the Tigers out defensively all game long as he produced a sparkling 17-save effort.

"On those little spurts, when you are really a good team, you give up two goals instead of three. You've got to take a step back and learn how to dig in. I thought the Rutgers game (a 7-6 win on March 25) helped teach us how to dig in and play really good tough defense because they had the ball the whole fourth quarter. I still think we are getting there."

The Tigers will have to dig in hard this Saturday as they head up to the Carrier Dome to face top-ranked Syracuse (7-1).

"Last year in our game here, we felt very confident," said Tierney, referring to his team's 12-8 win over the Orange last spring.

"They were down last year. Now they are playing with a lot of confidence, they had a change in goal with a freshman who has had a great year. They got their faceoff man back, they didn't have one last year. It's going to be a test going up there; but I know the guys look forward to playing up there. We finally got two wins in a row. We have the Ivy League in front of us so we'll go up there and give it everything we've got."

Coccoziello, for his part, is looking forward to the challenge posed by high-powered Syracuse.

"They are back, they have that swagger," said Coccoziello. "We'll have a good week of practice. They have a good offense, we're excited about going against them."

"SPRING PLANTING? PICK TREES FOR THE LOCATION"

How many times when driving through a lovely community, have you observed that many trees are hacked away by the utility company so as to accommodate their wires?

The trees look horrible. If only the trees when planted, were the kind that would grow to below the wires and no higher. Maybe the trees could have been planted back further off the road so that their growth would not interfere with the wires. Think about planting for the space, environmental conditions, wet or dry and sunlight and wind exposure. It seems like common sense, but little consideration is given to the aforementioned conditions.

"It looked great when I planted it, I never thought it would get that large, but aren't Weeping Willows great for wet area?" These are common comments tree professionals hear while they are taking down some of these expensive problems, and think of the tree growing years lost, now that you have to start planting from the beginning again.

Do some plant research, books and catalogs will give you most of the information you need. Mature height, width, color, fruit or flower, wet or dry, sun or shade site. By the way, when doing your research on trees use several books on the same trees and also use plant catalogs. You are bound to get some facts on a tree in one book that isn't mentioned in another.

While we are not in the planting business, we continually deal with "the right tree in the wrong place." Feel free to call us for a consultation prior to planting. Call WOODWINDS (609) 924-3500 for a spring garden consultation.

PU Sports Roundup

Princeton Softball Posts Banner Weekend

Sparked by some timely hitting, the Princeton University softball team swept visiting Harvard, 5-4 and 3-2, last Sunday to sweep the Crimson for the first time since 1996.

In the opener, a three-run homer by Collette Abbott in the third inning provided the margin of victory. In the nightcap, Kelsey Quist led the way, pounding out two doubles with 3 RBIs.

On Saturday, Princeton rode the long ball in a 4-3 and 8-2 sweep of Dartmouth. Jamie Lettice, Kathryn Welch, and Quist each clubbed two home runs on the day as Princeton started its Ivy league campaign in style.

The Tigers, now 7-17 overall and 4-0 in Ivy play, hit the road for doubleheaders at Yale on April 5 and at Brown on April 6.

Tiger Men's Crews Have Mixed Weekend

The Princeton University men's heavyweight crew opened the 2008 season in style, posting a dominant victory over Georgetown on Lake Carnegie last Saturday.

Princeton won the varsity eight showdown in 6:18.9, nearly seven full seconds faster than Georgetown's time of 6:25.7. Princeton also claimed wins in the second varsity (6:22.9) and the first novice (7:03.1) competitions, while Georgetown claimed a close win in the third varsity.

Down in Annapolis, Md., the Princeton men's lightweight crew fought hard but got edged by Navy.

Princeton's top boat covered the Severn River course in 5:52.3, just .3 of a second behind the Navy varsity boat.

In upcoming action, the Tiger men's heavyweight crew will host Rutgers on April 5 while the men's lightweight rowers will host Georgetown.

PU Women's Water Polo Edged By Bucknell

Squandering a late lead, the Princeton University women's water polo team fell 6-5 at Bucknell last Friday.

The Bison scored three unanswered goals to pull out the win over 16th-ranked Princeton. Tiger sophomore Lauren Sabb and freshman Tanya Wilcox each scored two goals in the loss.

The loss dropped Princeton to 12-9 overall and 0-1 in the CWPA South. In upcoming action, the Tigers host Bucknell and Maryland on April 5 and George Washington the next day.

PU Swimmer Lennox Earns All-America Honor

Princeton University junior men's swimmer Doug Lennox earned his first career All-America honor last weekend at the NCAA Men's Swimming Championships at the King County Aquatic Center at the University of Washington.

Lennox, whose 2007-08 swim season began by qualifying for the Puerto Rican Olympic team, placed fourth in the NCAA 200 butterfly final.

The Lake Forest, Ill. resident qualified for the 200 final with the fourth-fastest time in the field (1:43.06) and then posted a time of 1:42.80 in taking fourth in the final.

Lennox is Princeton's first All-American since 2006, when both junior Meir Hasban and senior Kent Demond earned the honor.

Senior Stuart Malcolm also competed Saturday in his final meet as a collegiate diver. Although he didn't qualify for a finals appearance on the platform competition, qualifying for the NAAs in his final year was a fitting conclusion to his Princeton career.

PU Women's Crews Post Solid Start

The sixth-ranked Princeton University women's open crew began its 2008 season with an impressive sweep of No. 3 Brown and Michigan State last Saturday at Lake Carnegie.

The Tiger varsity crew won the Brown/Princeton Trophy by covering the course in 7:13.4, while Michigan State finished second in 7:13.7 and Brown placed third in 7:21.1.

Meanwhile, the Princeton women's lightweight crew fared well out west at the 2008 Windermere Cup in Redwood Shores, Calif. The Tigers swept Loyola Marymount, MIT, and Stanford to complete a successful opening weekend.

The Princeton women's open crew hosts Rutgers and Columbia on April 5 while the women's lightweight rowers host MIT.

MAKING STRIDES: Princeton University senior pitching star Steven Miller fires a pitch as he helped Princeton top Harvard 6-5 last Sunday in the nightcap of a doubleheader between the rivals. Miller pitched all nine innings, striking out seven and giving up three earned runs on seven hits. In the opener, sophomore David Hale pitched Princeton to a 3-2 win over the Crimson. In upcoming action, Princeton, now 10-11 overall and 2-2 in Ivy League play, hits the road for doubleheaders at Yale on April 5 and at Brown on April 6 before hosting Monmouth on April 8.

With Graduation Losses Leaving Void, Youth to Be Served on PHS Girls' Lax

Youth will be served this spring on the Princeton High girls' lacrosse team but it's not like the program has any choice.

PHS lost eight starters to graduation from its 2007 squad, including the three top scorers and the star goalie from a team that went 10-6.

"We certainly are a different team," said longtime head coach Joyce Jones.

"One of the girls was looking for a DVD from a game last spring and I said last year is history. We knew who to throw the ball to; right now the roles are up in the air. This season is about who is going to fill those shoes."

Jones is welcoming back two veterans in the midfield, juniors Liz Price and Mie Graham, who should fill shoes when it comes to offensive production.

"Lizzy Price has been looking great, she's moving the ball well to the other players," said Jones, who has been guiding the program since the 1970s.

"Mie Graham is also doing well; she has that speed and stickwork, she played in the offseason."

Others who should see action in the midfield include senior Carter Haughton, junior Carly Edgcomb, together with sophomores Jessica Delaney and Corey Henderson, and freshman Virginia Rogers.

On attack, Jones is depending on seniors Kaitlin Henderson and Suzanne Hudis together with freshmen Taylor Blair and McKenzie Henderson.

The Little Tiger defense will feature a blend of experience and youth.

"Mary McNutt is a senior, she is doing a great job; she is one of our key communicators," asserted Jones. "Jen Bone is a little freshman; she is looking good. Morgan Slade, a junior, is on the line defense."

PHS will be looking to junior Maddie O'Meara to fill the big shoes left by star goalie Erin Hoerner.

"Maddie looks great," added Jones. "She's had some good scrimmages and she knows her role."

While Jones is going with a lot of young players, she maintains that many of her newcomers already know the game pretty well.

"The freshmen have been playing with clubs, they have been in game situations," said Jones.

"They know what to do on 2-on-1s, they understand spatial concepts; it makes for a stronger foundation. There is a real enthusiasm, they are learning with each game."

The Little Tigers will start that learning curve this week when they are slated to play at Lawrence on April 1 before hosting Hopewell Valley on April 3 and Ewing on April 7.

"We start with Lawrence and then we play Hopewell Valley, those will be real tests," said Jones.

"We have to take things one game at a time, work together, and learn from mistakes. It's a new chapter."

PHS Boys' Lax Needs Defense to Step Up As It Looks to Continue Winning Tradition

In recent years, the Princeton High boys' lacrosse team has featured high-powered offensive stars like Bennett Murphy and Tyler Moni.

But PHS head coach Peter Stanton points to a talented and battle-tested group of defensemen as a key to Princeton's success the last two seasons.

With four-year starting defenders Casey Rahn and Jesse Mostoller together with three-year starter Chad Pinto having departed due to graduation, rebuilding the defense is a top priority for PHS this spring.

"You look at our defense, we lost not only good players but players who had played together for years, said Stanton, whose team starts its 2008 campaign with a game at Notre Dame on April 4. "Defense takes a lot of reps."

The tradition established by PHS' outstanding defense has inspired this year's unit which features senior co-captain Pat Long and classmate Daniel Naaman together with junior Dario Presepe and sophomore Jay Dwyer.

"Between those four, there is athleticism," said Stanton, whose team went 10-6 last spring as it advanced to the state Group II semifinals.

"They are aware of the guys that played before them and what they accomplished. They definitely want to keep that going."

One constant on the defense will be junior goalie Jeff Goeke, who improved by leaps and bounds last spring in his first season as a starter.

"You can see the difference in him between this year and last," noted Stanton.

"Last year everything was new to him, this year he has a much better idea of how to prepare himself. He will lead the defense."

Up front, Stanton is looking for a pair of seniors Brandon Polakoff and Garrett Riley together with sophomore Mike Olentine to lead the attack.

"The three of them know how to move the ball and how to find each other," asserted Stanton.

In the midfield, PHS has found some numbers. "We'll be running two offensive units and a defensive unit," added Stanton. "We have some depth and flexibility in the midfield."

The offensive midfielders include seniors Luke Brunskill and Will Moseley together with sophomores Doug and Allen Bryant and Jordan Metro.

The defensive group will feature juniors Nick Hughes and Alex Meadow, sophomore Brian Vieten, and freshman Mike Hellstern. At longstick midfielder, PHS will use freshmen Mike Irving and Jack Miller.

While PHS lost nearly 15 players to graduation, Stanton believes the players possess the diligence and togetherness needed to maintain the program's winning tradition.

"We feel like we have an athletic team that is willing to work hard," said Stanton.

"We couldn't be happier with the team's willingness to work and play together. We have a few seniors who have played in the shadows of last year's seniors and they are looking for breakout years. Guys like Moseley and Naaman didn't get to play a lot as juniors but they put in the hard work. The young guys are enthusiastic; I hope they are ahead of schedule."

The Little Tigers spent last week down in South Carolina on their annual preseason trip, looking to both sharpen their skills and strengthen team bonds.

"We'll be working out with teams from Ohio, Florida, and Connecticut," said Stanton.

"What we have found is that the team building experience is the best part about the spring trips. The time off the field, the guys enjoy hanging out and doing things together. We find that a closer-knit team tends to overachieve."

In order to achieve success this spring, PHS will be focusing on the basics.

"The focus is on teaching the fundamentals of the game, teaching lacrosse fundamentals with the idea that you can't do a lot if you are not throwing and catching well," said Stanton, who credits assistant coaches Jason Carter and Terence Miller with playing key roles in that process.

"How we pick up the team concepts and how well the defense learns to play will be keys."

Inspired by Success of Other PHS Teams, Little Tiger Baseball Aiming for Playoffs

It has already been a banner year for some high profile Princeton High sports programs that had suffered through some hard times in recent years.

This past fall, the PHS football team turned heads as it won the Valley Division title and qualified for the state playoffs for the first time since 1993.

Over the winter, the Little Tiger boys' basketball team earned respect as it advanced to the Mercer County Tournament quarterfinals and made its first appearance in the state tournament since the 2000-01 season.

With the PHS baseball team having gone 4-19-1 in 2007, second-year head coach Scott Goldsmith said his players have gained inspiration from the achievements of the football and hoops programs.

"With football and basketball having made the states this year, the kids realize that teams that haven't made it in awhile are capable of doing it," said Goldsmith, whose team gets its 2008 season underway by playing at Lawrence on April 1, hosting Hightstown on April 3 and Montgomery on April 5, and then playing at Hopewell Valley on April 7.

"We are looking for leadership from our seniors and a positive season. We're not setting our goals too high, we're focused on going .500."

Although the Little Tigers lost 10 players to graduation, Goldsmith is happy with his core of seniors this spring.

"It looks big in numbers but we are returning some key starters," said Goldsmith, referring to the team's graduation losses.

"Johnny Miranda and Chris Brooks are veterans. Luke LaVoie is hurt but hopefully will be back in May."

Goldsmith is looking to junior Matt Alvarez to lead the PHS mound corps.

"Matt Alvarez should be our ace," asserted Goldsmith. "He played baseball all year round and he did a lot of the showcase camps. He's looking sharp."

PHS will also be looking to Miranda, Benito Gonzales, and David Staller to help out with the pitching duties.

"Johnny Miranda loves baseball, he's been geared up; he's been so excited to be on the field that last week and a half," said Goldsmith. "Benito should also get some innings. Staller is a good leader."

As for the batting attack, Goldsmith is looking for sophomore Trevor Barsamian, a star running back/defensive lineman for the football team, to provide some punch.

"Trevor is our long ball hitter," said Goldsmith. "He's definitely our power source."

The Little Tigers have some good bats around Barsamian. "David Grillin will bat lead-off, he was our third best hitter last year," added Goldsmith.

"Johnny will bat second, Brooks will bat third, Trevor is at cleanup and Alvarez after that, he's got a pretty strong bat."

Goldsmith acknowledges that his team will have to tighten up in the field if it is to have a shot at reaching the .500 mark.

"We have to play well defensively, we can't give teams extra opportunities to score runs," said Goldsmith. "We have to get that third out."

The PHS defensive line-up is basically set, according to Goldsmith. "First base is open but it looks like Benito will be playing there, Johnny Miranda will be at second, Brooks at shortstop, and Alvarez at third when he isn't pitching," said Goldsmith. "In the outfield we will have Griffin, Steve Fuchs, and Nick Miranda."

With a year of head coaching experience under his belt, Goldsmith believes everybody around the program is on the same page.

"It's the same group I've been with for a while with a couple of newcomers," said Goldsmith.

"We're going to be aggressive on the base paths and do hit and runs. We need our pitchers to keep the runs down and take advantage of the opportunities we get."

Buoyed by Work Ethic, Greater Depth, PHS Softball Aims to Be Competitive

While its 2-20 record last spring may not show it, the Princeton High softball team made progress over the latter stages of the spring.

The Little Tigers ended the season with an 18-0 romp over Trenton, a win that helped encourage the players to be more diligent over the offseason.

PHS head coach Craig Haywood could see a definite change in his players' approach over the winter.

"They have been working hard," said Haywood, who said his players' chief aim this season is to match the program's single season record of eight wins.

"A bunch of the girls got together on their own in the offseason and did conditioning and softball stuff."

One of the hardest workers for PHS has been sophomore pitching ace Deanna Boehm.

"She spent a lot of time working with her pitching coach over the winter," said Haywood, who is entering his third season at the helm of the program. "She's grown a little and she's stronger."

Boehm has also developed in the mental aspect of the game. "She thought she would come in last year and pitch in a couple of games," recalled Haywood, noting that Boehm had to handle all the mound duties after previous ace Dylan Zink was sidelined.

"She never visualized pitching every game; she was used to pitching 12-15 games at the junior high level. She knows what's expected at the high school level."

PHS has more flexibility in its rotation this year as freshmen Shelbe Randall and Jenna Panconi also figure to get some innings this season.

The pitchers will be in capable hands with senior co-captain Kasey Reisman again handling the catching duties.

"Kasey is our all-around leader, she's a co-captain and our catcher," said Haywood, whose team gets its 2008 season underway by playing at Lawrence on April 1, hosting Hightstown on April 3, and playing at Franklin on April 5 and Hopewell Valley on April 7.

"She has grown quite a lot as a catcher since her sophomore year. She works well with Deanna; they worked together all year last season. Kasey knows when to go out and calm Deanna down."

In addition to her value behind the plate, Reisman also is a catalyst offensively for PHS, having hit .344 last spring.

"She is key in our batting order," added Haywood.

"She hit over .400 last May to get her average up to .344."

Other key producers for PHS at the plate figure to be junior co-captains Rachel Basie and Jessica Hart together with sophomore third baseman Arienna Joyce and Boehm.

Hart compiled a .326 batting average last spring while Basie hit .288 and Joyce was at .292 with 10 RBIs. Boehm helped herself on the mound, hitting .389 with 9 RBIs.

While PHS should score runs, Haywood sees the team's play in the field as the key to its improvement.

"The main thing is our defense; we need to limit the number of errors," asserted Haywood.

"In some games over the years, that has killed us. Against Hightstown last year, we lost 9-8 and we could have won that game if we hadn't made key errors. When we made one error, it seemed to snowball. We have four key spots — Deanna at pitcher, Kasey at catcher, Rachel at shortstop, and Jess in center field. If those four players are on the same page, we should be competitive."

In Haywood's view, it will be critical for the team's psyche to be competitive right off the bat this spring.

"They don't want to have the same season they had last year," said Haywood.

"They are coming off a rough season; we need to have a good start. We don't need to win all the games at the beginning, we just need to be close. If we are losing games 2-1 rather than 15-0, that will be progress."

Haywood has come up with a unique motivational ploy to help keep his team focused on its goals.

"I told them that if they break the school record, I will arrange with the principal to have an assembly with the whole school," said Haywood. "I'll sit at center court of the gym and let them shave my head."

The PHS players would dearly love to get the shears out later this spring.

Hun Baseball Relying on Pitching Depth As It Looks to Defend Prep A, MAPL Titles

Featuring a murderers' row lineup that resembled a high school version of the 1927 Yankees, the Hun School baseball team pounded its foes into submission last spring.

In going 20-4 and winning both the state Prep A and Mid-Atlantic Prep League (MAPL) titles, the Raiders set program single-season records for wins, runs, homers, and hits.

As Hun looks forward to the 2008 season, longtime head coach Bill McQuade recognizes that graduation losses mean his team won't be an offensive juggernaut this spring.

"We won't be as strong offensively; six of those kids are playing in college this spring," said McQuade, whose senior class last year Included such standouts as Shane Davis, Andrew Baxter, Sean Munley, Sean Pucciarelli, and Matt Welsh.

"We broke just about every school record last year offensively; we will have to work harder for runs this year."

Hun will be looking at senior shortstop Mel Williams to be its catalyst once again.

"Williams will be leading off, he set the school record in hits and runs last year," asserted McQuade, who is in his 38th season guiding Hun. "He's got to get on base for us."

While McQuade believes the lineup should have pop, he needs the bottom of the order to be a factor.

"We have John Gianis,

Mike Ford, Mike Russo, Dave Putman, and Brendan Dudeck after Williams," said McQuade, whose team hosts Lawrenceville on April 3 and St. Luke's on April 5.

"I think our top six are solid. We need the bottom three to come through; we can't afford to throw away three outs every three innings."

Hun will need such young players as freshman Chris Leach together with sophomores Patrick Andrews and Julian Dandridge to come through.

McQuade, though, is plenty confident that his pitching staff can throw the team to plenty of victories as the Hun offense gets up to speed.

The Ralder mound corps features N.C. State-bound Russo (6-1, 0.94 ERA in 2007), Duke-bound Putman, and promising sophomore Ford, a transfer from Montgomery High.

"Russo is bigger and stronger and has more command of all of his pitches," said McQuade, noting that 18 major league scouts turned up to see the powerful right-hander in the team's first outing on its preseason trip to Florida.

"Putman is healthy; he's got a fastball that should top out at 90 m.p.h., right now he's at 86 or so. His curve ball is devastating when it's working, it can buckle your knees. Ford is our third starter; he could be No. 1 on a lot of teams."

A critical part of the pitching staff could well be N.C. State-bound Gianis, who McQuade is counting on to be the team's top reliever.

"Gianis will come into play, we need him to fill relief role," said McQuade.

"He hasn't done much throwing in the past two years but he could be a big help. A key last year was Baxter and Pucciarelli giving us two or three innings in relief. That allowed us to pitch Russo five innings and then have him come back sooner than he would have if he had gone seven."

In McQuade's view, the team's recent trip to Florida could be a preview of how things may go this spring for Hun.

"We played well every game; I think we won five of seven games," said McQuade.

"It was like what I think we will be like this season. The pitching was dominant at times, the defense was solid but the hitting struggled until the last three games."

We will have to play small ball — steal more bases, hit and run, be more aggressive."

Although Hun likely won't be dominant from wire-to-wire this spring, McQuade is hoping his team can end things with a bang.

"We are a team that should gather steam as the season goes on," said McQuade.

"The pitching has to come through at the start and the defense has to be solid. The younger kids have to play and contribute. The kids all get along, the group had a lot of fun down in Florida."

And if the batting catches up with the pitching, Hun could have a lot of fun this spring.

TRAINED EYE: Longtime Hun School baseball head coach Bill McQuade surveys the action last spring. McQuade guided the Raiders to a 20-4 record in 2007 as the Raiders won both the state Prep A and Mid-Atlantic Prep League (MAPL) titles and set program single-season records for wins, runs, homers, and hits. McQuade, now in his 38th season at the helm of the program, will lead the Raiders into 2008 action when they host Lawrenceville on April 3 and St. Luke's on April 5.

Featuring Key Veterans, Talented Newcomers, PDS Girls' Lacrosse Reloading for Title Run

On paper, it would appear that the Princeton Day School girls' lacrosse team is looking at a rebuilding season this spring.

Last year, the Panthers went 17-2 and reached the state Prep A and Mercer County Tournament championship games, fueled by such senior stars Keely Langdon, Maria Cannavo, and the Crouse twins, Allie and Nina.

While acknowledging that the graduation of those seniors is leaving a void, PDS head coach Jill Thomas is confident that the program will still be a championship contender.

"We have to continue to have high expectations," said Thomas, whose team opens its 2008 season by hosting Blair on April 2.

"We have to work hard and build on where we were. We're not going backward. We are reloading."

The PDS offense should be going forward much of the season with seniors Hannah Epstein and Erin Burns together with juniors Cammie Llnville and Georgia Travers leading the way.

"We will have Hannah, Erin Burn, Cammie Llnville, and Georgia Travers on offense," said Thomas. "They work well together. We are mixing experience with the new."

PDS has a talented group of new players in freshmen Sydney Jenkins, Katie Gibson, Carly O'Brien, Jackie Stevens, and the Frieder twins, Allison and Jess.

"We have some young kids who are going to play," said Thomas.

One of those kids, Jess Frieder, will play a key role right from the start as she replaces Cannavo in the goal.

Thomas will have some talented veterans in the back to patrol things in front of Frieder.

"We will have Charlotte Lescroart, Allison Sorrentino, and Erin Cook back there," said Thomas.

The Panthers were down in Florida last week on their annual preseason trip, which Thomas views as a critical step in getting her veterans and newcomers on the same page.

"We want to play a lot; there is a big difference between the junior game and the varsity game," asserted Thomas.

"We want to get these kids a lot of work down there. You can do the work on the wall and have great skills but there is no substitute for playing the game."

Thomas believes her team will be playing the game at a high level by the time the postseason rolls around.

"When you mix experience and talented athletes, the sky is the limit," said Thomas.

"It's not where you start it's where you finish. I really enjoy working with these kids, they are like sponges. Experience comes everyday, you should tuck away something everyday."

Blending Patience With Opportunistic Play, Stone Brings New Style to Hun Girls' Lax

As the longtime head coach of the Hun School boys' basketball program, Jon Stone has been known for producing teams that exercise patience mixed with an ability to fast break when opportunity presents itself.

This spring, Stone is looking to instill a similar style as he takes the helm of the Hun girls' lacrosse team.

"Certainly we will have our patience," said Stone, who is replacing Lauren Provenzano.

"We will run the ball when we can; we can get goals in transition. Like with basketball, when we have numbers, let's take it; when we don't, then be patient."

Stone, who has served as an assistant coach for the Hun boy's lacrosse team, is exercising patience as he gets himself up to speed on the nuances of the girls' game.

"It's a different game than the boys'," said Stone, who is taking over a team that went 7-6 last spring.

"The stick skills are the same but it's a different game. It's been a bit of a challenge. I have been talking a lot to Brianne Tierney, (a current assistant with the Monmouth women's program and the daughter of Princeton men's lax coach Bill Tierney) she has a good knowledge of both the girls' and boys' games."

Hun returns some players with offensive game in seniors Sarah Appelt, Bridget Stinson, and Melissa Marino together with juniors Addie Godfrey and Emma Molloy.

"I think Sarah, Melissa, and Bridget will all score for us," said Stone, whose team gets the 2008 season underway by playing at Hillsborough on April 4 and then hosting Pingry on April 7.

"We should have a certain amount of balance. Sarah is obviously very talented and will be a big part of anything we do. Addie and Emma are both very experienced with good sticks."

Stone is looking for Stinson and Marino to be the engines in the midfield.

"Bridget and Melissa are made for that position," asserted Stone. "They are really strong competitors who can run all day."

While Stone likes his squad's offensive punch, he will be putting a premium on stopping other teams. "The defense is every bit a part of the game as offense," said Stone.

"Michele Miller and Maura Giordano are good back there. I've also been happy with Maddie Welch and Laura Coyle, they are very aggressive."

At goalie, Stone will be going with junior Valencia Washington and freshman Kara Kettlekamp.

"I'm giving the nod to Valencia right now as the starter," said Stone. "She's had a good spring; she's a pretty good competitor. Kara has talent; she will get some chances."

The team's recent preseason trip to Florida gave Stone a good chance to get a handle on his new team.

"It was good, we got a lot accomplished," said Stone, referring to the trip. "It was a good chance for me as a first year coach to get to know the girls and their chemistry. I think that have responded pretty well to me."

Stone is confident his players will respond well as the season unfolds.

"I think it comes down to chemistry and the ability to play defense," said Stone. "We have talent, it's a matter of melding it and having things come together."

PROBLEM SOLVING DESIGN

Your problems solved, your questions answered.

SIMPLE DESIGN SOLUTIONS FOR SPRING CLEANING - Forecast for Spring
Starting out fresh — Ideas to consider before starting your projects.

Clean - (adjective) streamlined, simple and flowing in design, without projections or additions. From Encarta Dictionary Online.

Many people look at the spring as a time for renewal and a chance to leap into a project. Before you jump in, note the status of what you have and look for inspiration by getting the house ready for all the holidays, parties, and warm summer days ahead. After the harsh winter, it's a good idea to go over your home inside and out and make a list. You should consult a professional to assess any damage or problems that need to be addressed or repaired, such as a heaving walkway or a potholed driveway.

If you've been frustrated all winter with a drafty door or window — (you know the same one you've been staring out of all season and don't particularly like the style or size) — now is the perfect time to replace it with an insulated weather-tight model. This way you have an updated new look while solving the problem of energy conservation.

Not only is the warm weather favorable for garden projects and outside house repairs, it is great for changes to the inside. You spend more time outside during the warmer months and a majority of people vacation during spring and summer. This can be a proactive solution to avoid the inconvenience of being without your bathroom or kitchen during a remodel. Planning now to start your design scheme and then beginning the project while you are away is as easy as creative scheduling with your professional.

There are many ways to get extra benefits from home maintenance and repairs. Let's say it's time to paint the exterior. There are options that can give your house a new look and add that "Wow Factor" at the same time. There are many maintenance-free products that can help save energy and in the long run save you money and future maintenance problems.

One of the largest visual elements on a home is the roof. So if it is time for a new roof, why not take a look into the multitude of color and texture options. It can make a huge difference overall for energy costs, the life of the roof, and once again, fantastic curb appeal.

Now is a good time to properly vent the attic space. By addressing ventilation, you help the materials breathe and at the same time reduce your energy costs for cooling.

The list for homeowners goes on and on, so don't be overwhelmed. I can help you with an Architect's eye. Together, we can forecast a warming trend towards energy conservation while addressing your common maintenance goals.

Join me next time when I will share: "PET PROJECTS."

WATERPROOFING PAINT WITHSTANDS WIND-DRIVEN RAIN AT HURRICANE FORCE.

Outstanding reports from painting contractors and laboratory testing confirm the superior waterproofing qualities of Muralo Tite.

Independent lab reports showed no moisture penetration of concrete masonry blocks painted with Tite and exposed to wind-driven rain at hurricane force, in accordance with Federal Specification TT-C-555B. By comparison, conventional acrylic house paint was 100% saturated after only five hours. Copies of the lab report are available for your inspection.

Such performance leads the Muralo Company to offer a 5-year warranty on Tite's waterproofing abilities.

Tite is a vinyl latex paint designed to fill, seal and beautify in any location where superior water-resistance is required. It leaves a beautiful plastic-like finish on all masonry. Tite may be applied by spray, brush or roller directly to damp or dry interior and exterior surfaces.

Princeton Recreation Day Camp Registration
Registration is underway for the Princeton Recreation Department summer day camp program.

The Princeton Recreation day camp is open to Princeton Borough/Township residents as well as children of municipal and public school employees.

The day camp is open to children who will be in grades 1-6 in September. The camp begins on June 23 and will run Monday to Friday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. The last day of camp will be August 1.

There is also pre-camp program (beginning at 7:45 a.m.) with after-camp care available (until 5:30 p.m.) for an additional fee. Early-bird registrants will receive a $40 discount until May 9.

The Princeton Recreation Department day camp uses Community Park South and C.P. Pool as its home base. Activities include daily swimming, arts and crafts, sports, day-trips, nature walks and special events held at the campsite.

Campers are split up by gender and grade. The counselor/camper ratio is 1/5 for younger groups and 1/8 for older groups.

Registration forms can be picked up at the recreation office or downloaded from www.princetonrecreation.com.

For more information, please visit the Rec Department website or call (609) 921-9480.

Rec Department Hosting Hoops Camp

The Princeton Recreation Department is hosting two weeks of basketball camps for boys in this summer.

"Camp Carter" is open to students who will be entering grades 5 through 9 in September of 2008. Jason Carter, the Princeton High boys' basketball head coach, will serve as the Camp Director.

There are two one-week sessions of camp. The first week is from July 14-18 while the next session runs from August 4-8. The camp day goes from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. with the instructional portion of the camp taking place between 1 and 3 p.m. each day. Campers have the option of coming to Community Park Pool at 3 each day and swimming until 5.

All camp sessions will take place at PHS' new gymnasium. Daily activities will include general skill work, live game play, 3-on-3 competition, 1-on-1 skill work, and much more. Campers will swim at Community Park Pool at the end of each camp day.

PU Rugby Club Hosting N.J. Tourney

The Princeton University rugby club is hosting the second annual All-New Jersey State Rugby Championship on April 5.

In the men's field, Drew, Montclair State, Rutgers, and Seton Hall, will be competing along with Princeton. The Tigers topped Seton Hall in last year's inaugural title game.

A separate bracket will also be played by participating teams' B-side teams, and, for the first time, a women's championship between New Jersey teams Rutgers and Princeton will be played, as well as two women's exhibition games with Hofstra.

Games will begin at 10 a.m. and continue all day on the West Windsor Fields in Princeton. Food and drinks will be sold all day at the field. There is no admission charge for spectators and the public is welcome. Following the championship match, an All-Tournament Team will be announced.

Senior Softball League Seeking Players

The Mercer Senior Softball Association is currently forming teams for its 2008 season.

There are Over-50 and Over-60 leagues which have openings for players. The leagues play at Mercer County Park and have games two evenings a week.

Clubs

55PLUS will meet tomorrow, April 3 at 10 a.m. at the Jewish Center of Princeton, 435 Nassau Street, for a talk by Princeton University professor Linda Colley on "Elizabeth Marsh: A Woman in World History."

Prof. Colley is the Shelby M.C. Davis 1958 Professor of History at Princeton, where she has taught since 2003. Her current book project, The Ordeal of Elizabeth Morsh: The World in a Life, traces an 18th-century woman's progress from the Caribbean to Britain, to the Mediterranean and North Africa, and on to India as a way of exploring growing connections and collisions between continents and cultures.

55PLUS is a non-sectarian group organized to promote social contacts and friendships among men who are either retired or who have flexible working hours. It meets on the first and third Thursday mornings of each month except June, July, and August to discuss a wide range of topics with prominent speakers. Its meetings are open to the public.

The Piano Teachers Forum will meet this Friday,

April 4 at 9:30 a.m. at Musicians in the Making, the studio of Linda Fields, in The Office Center, Building 500, Suite 505, Plainsboro Road at Deer Creek Drive, Plainsboro. For directions, visit info@musiciansinthemaking.com.

The program, "What Music Works for You and Why," will be an open forum for the membership to present and share experiences and insights with favorite materials. It will be led by Linda Fields and Jean Parsons, longtime piano teachers and members of the Piano Teachers Forum.

The Piano Teachers Forum meets the first Friday of every month to hear speakers and clinicians. For more information, call Jean Parsons at (609) 921-1510. Non-members are welcome for a $10 fee at the door.

The Princeton Macintosh Users Group will meet on Tuesday, April 8 at 7:30 p.m. in Room A-10 (auditorium) of Jadwin Hall at Princeton University.

PMUG veterans Dean Acquaviva of Lawrenceville and Jan Williams of Rocky Hill will present two separate topics. Mr. Acquaviva will describe using Reunion Genealogy Software to keep genealogical records and give tips on using the Internet to research family genealogy. Ms. Williams will talk about recycling computer equipment.

Obituaries

Robert F. Goheen was born August 15, 1919, in Vengurla, India, where his parents were serving as Presbyterian medical missionaries. He moved to the United States in 1934 to finish his high school education at the Lawrenceville School, and graduated with honors in two years. At age 17 he entered Princeton, the alma mater of both his grandfather and his brother, as a member of the class of 1940. His family recalls him as a lifelong fan of Princeton athletics and an avid fisherman and gardener. After earning an A.B. in classics, he enrolled in Princeton's Graduate School to continue his study in the field.

However, his work was interrupted by his induction into the Army in the buildup to World War II. He served in the intelligence section of the 1st Cavalry Division for more than four years, attaining the rank of lieutenant colonel.

He re-enrolled in 1945 and combined his graduate studies with work as a part-time preceptor and tutor. He earned his M.A. in 1947 and his Ph.D. in 1948, both in classics. He continued teaching classics at Princeton and was named an assistant professor in 1950. From 1953 to 1956, he was the director of the National Woodrow Wilson Fellowship Program.

In 1956, he was selected to become Princeton's 16th president and, when he assumed office in July 1957, he was the third youngest president in the University's history.

Mr. Goheen's own thoughts and recollections about his time at Princeton recently were videotaped and placed on file in the University's Mudd Manuscript Library. On them, he said that he was most proud of his efforts to diversify the campus. Princeton first opened its doors to women as graduate students in 1961 and as regular members of the undergraduate student body in 1969. Under his leadership, it also implemented measures to attract a more racially and ethnically diverse group of students and faculty. "Diversity, pushing the effort to get more blacks and other minorities into the University body, whether it be student body or faculty, and then the women — I think both of those changed the character of Princeton for the better," he said.

He also was known for his efforts to incorporate more faculty and student voices into University governance. This priority became most important during the early 1970s, as many campuses erupted in protests. After the American invasion in Cambodia, student protests culminated in a general strike at Princeton. He spoke at the assembly of students, faculty and staff on May 4, 1970. Many attributed the relatively peaceful way the campus dealt with the issues to the wisdom and flexibility of his administration. He also led the University's first capital fundraising drive, the $53 Million for Princeton University Campaign launched on February 21, 1959. The three-year effort ultimately raised more than $60 million to strengthen the endowment and finance new buildings — notably the expansion of the Engineering Quadrangle. Also built during his presidency were Jadwin Gymnasium, the University Art Museum, the Woolworth Center of Musical Studies, the Architecture Building, and Robertson, Fine, Jadwin, and Peyton halls.

Harold T. Shapiro, president of Princeton from 1988 to 2001, also described him as "the first architect of today's Princeton. He started us on the path to what Princeton is today: a coed-educational, diverse, research university of great international stature. It wasn't easy to lead Princeton through these transformations, but Bob Goheen was a man of enormous personal courage and integrity who could admit when he was wrong, who listened carefully to others, and who had a clear understanding of the University's core values and highest priorities."

After retiring as president of Princeton, he served as president of the Council on Foundations from 1972 to 1976 and as president of the Edna McConnell Clark Foundation from January through April 1977. President Jimmy Carter then appointed him ambassador to India, where he served from May 1977 through December 1980. Having been born and raised in India, he described his appointment as an opportunity to return to his first home. Upon returning to Princeton in 1981, he began teaching in the Woodrow Wilson School. He also directed the Andrew W. Mellon Fellowship Program in the Humanities for the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation.

Over the years, he served as a board member of numerous organizations, ranging from American University of Beirut to the National Humanities Center in Research Triangle Park, N.C., to the Village Charter School in Trenton. He was also active in the American Philosophical Society.

Survivors include his wife of 66 years, Margaret; six children, Anne Goheen Crane of Ridgewood, Trudi Goheen Swain of Amherst, Mass., Stephen S. Goheen of Corvallis, Mont., Megan Goheen Lower of Baltimore, Elizabeth Goheen of Princeton and Charley R. Goheen of Wellesley, Mass.; 18 grandchildren; and six great-grandchildren. Burial will be private. A service of remembrance and celebration will take place at a later date in the University Chapel. In lieu of flowers, the family has requested that memorial contributions be made to Princeton University's Annual Giving program.

a Princeton tradition!

Robert Fagles

Robert Fagles, 74, the Arthur Marks '19 Professor of Comparative Literature Emeritus at Princeton University, died March 26 in Princeton of prostate cancer. A renowned translator of Greek classics, he was widely acclaimed for his best-selling translations of Homer's The Iliad and The Odyssey. He also created English renditions of The Oresteia by Aeschylus and The Three Theban Plays by Sophocles as well as Virgil's The Aeneid.

"He was a quiet man, diligent and decorous, yet one who was unexpectedly equal to the swagger and savagery of Homer's Iliad and Odyssey in a way no one had managed before him," said Prof. Paul Muldoon, chair of the Lewis Center for the Arts. Added Robert Hollander, professor of European literature and French and Italian emeritus and a colleague for some 40 years, "No translator of major writers in the Western literary tradition has ever met with the kind of success that Robert Fagles enjoyed. His 'trilogy' — both epics of Homer and that of Virgil — has brought these texts to life for over a million readers. It was a joy to share some of his joy in that success with him."

Born in Philadelphia, Prof. Fagles earned his bachelor's degree, summa cum laude, in English literature from Amherst College in 1955. He completed his Ph.D. in English literature at Yale University in 1959 and taught there as an instructor for a year. He joined the Princeton faculty in the Department of English in 1960.

Starting in 1966, he directed Princeton's Program in Comparative Literature, which attained department status in 1975. He served as founding chair of the department from 1975 to 1994.

Prof. Fagles's teaching and research specialties were the classical tradition in English and European literature; the theory and practice of translation; interrelationships between the arts; and forms of poetry: lyric, tragic, and epic. He received numerous awards over the years, including the National Humanities Medal, the PEN/Ralph Manheim Medal for Translation, the Academy Award in Literature from the American Academy of Arts and Letters, the Harold Morton Landon Translation Award of the Academy of American Poets, and Princeton's Behrman Award for Distinguished Achievement in the Humanities. He was elected to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, the American Philosophical Society, and the American Academy of Arts and Letters.

Prof. Fagles retired from the faculty in 2002. This past June, Princeton awarded him an honorary doctor of humane letters for "four decades of feats on behalf of Princeton, as the founding father of comparative literature, as a gracious and wise colleague and as an inspiring mentor and teacher."

He is survived by his wife of 51 years, Lynne; two daughters, Katya Fagles of Randolph, N.J. and Nina Hartley of Hampden, Maine; and three grandchildren.

Burial will be private. A memorial service in the University Chapel is being planned in late May.

Bertha G. Baunach

Bertha G. Baunach, 99, of Princeton, died March 30 in University Medical Center at Princeton.

Born Bertha Hedgepeth in Warren County, N.C., she was raised in Virginia and came to Princeton as a young bride in 1932.

She was a member of Kingston Presbyterian Church, having served over the years on its many committees and events. She was secretary of Charles F. Baunach and Sons, Inc. She was an avid baker, sewer, and gardener.

Wife of the late Charles Sr. and mother of the late Virginia L. Baunach, she is survived by two sons, Charles of Princeton and Gerald of Pennington; a daughter, Carolyn of Ewing; a brother, Julian of Hopewell, Va.; and four grandchildren.

The funeral service will be today, April 2 at 11 a.m. at Kingston Presbyterian Church, 4561 State Highway 27, Kingston. Burial will follow in Kingston Presbyterian Church Cemetery.

Friends may call from 10:30 a.m. until time of service at the church.

Memorial contributions may be made to Princeton First Aid and Rescue Squad, P.O. Box 529, Princeton 08542; or to a charity of the donor's choice.

THE WOODROW WILSON
National Fellowship Foundation

The Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation is deeply saddened by the death of Robert F. Goheen (WF '45).

One of the first four Woodrow Wilson Fellows, Dr. Goheen served as national director of the Woodrow Wilson Fellowship Program from 1953 to 1956, returned to the Foundation from 1982 to 1992 as founding director of the Mellon Fellowships in the Humanities, and was a Trustee of the Foundation from 1992 until his retirement from the Board in 2001.

Brilliant, visionary, the personification of integrity, decency, and humility, Dr. Goheen was both an extraordinary force in American higher education and an exceptional human being.

Annette S. B. Weinrich

Annette S. Broderick Weinrich of Princeton died March 30 at Merwick in Princeton.

The widow of J. Lawrence Broderick and Carl C. Weinrich, she was born in Nashville, Tennessee, and attended Peabody College of Vanderbilt University and Falls Business College.

She retired in 1973 from Princeton University as administrative aide to the Dean of the University Chapel.

A volunteer for many activities in Princeton, she was member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, a 40-year member of the Altar Guild of Trinity Church, and an active member of Trinity Church, Rocky Hill.

She is survived by two daughters, Diane Hamilton of Ashland, Ore. and Linda Miller of Hopewell; eight grandchildren; and 19 great-grandchildren.

A graveside service will be held today, April 2 at All Saints' Cemetery at 11:30 a.m.

Arrangements are under the direction of The Mather-Hodge Funeral Home.

Religion

Social Ethicist to Give Annual Seminary Lecture

Dr. Peter Paris, Elmer G. Homrighausen Professor of Christian Social Ethics Emeritus at Princeton Theological Seminary, will give the annual Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Lecture on Monday, April 7 at 7 p.m. in Miller Chapel. His lecture is titled "Moral Theatre in the Streets: The Role of Suffering in the Quest for Social Justice."

Dr. Paris joined the Seminary faculty in 1985. Prior to that he taught at Vanderbilt University Divinity School in Nashville, Tenn., and at Howard University School of Divinity in Washington, D.C. He earned his B.A. and M.Div. degrees at Acadia University in Nova Scotia, and his M.A.

and Ph.D. degrees at the University of Chicago, which honored him as alumnus of the year in 1995.

He has published Black Religious Leaders: Unity in Diversity, The Social Teaching of the Black Churches, and The Spirituality of African Peoples: The Search for a Common Moral Discourse, and coauthored chapters in books and many essays in academic journals.

The Princeton Seminary faculty established the annual King Lecture as a way of honoring the man who, according to Dr. Paris, "ranks among the greatest American leaders in both church and state because he combined religious, social, and political resources in pursuit of racial justice and the moral enhancement of the common life."

Free Lectures to Examine Bible in American Fiction

Princeton University Public Lectures and the Princeton University Press will sponsor a three-night series of Spencer Trask lectures by Biblical and comparative literature scholar Robert Alter. Prof. Alter is the Class of 1937 Professor of Hebrew and Comparative Literature at the University of California, Berkeley.

The lectures, entitled "The Bible and American Fiction: Melville, Faulkner, and Bellow," will take place in McCosh Hall 50 on the University campus on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, April 8, 9, and 10 at 8 p.m.

Prof. Alter is the author of several English translations of the Hebrew Scriptures, including The Five Books of Moses (2004) and The Book of Psalms (2007). Both volumes exemplify his key ideas about biblical narrative, analyzing the original text in terms of literary techniques such as parallelism, direct dialogue, and type scene. The lectures are free and open to the public. For more information, visit <http://lectures.princeton.edu>.

What a Wonderful House! What a Wonderful Buy!

Nestled high above the trees and enjoying every aspect of the views, sits this truly remarkable home which was thoughtfully designed by Maximillian Hayden and beautifully executed by Lewis Barber. Inspired by European villas of old, with every amenity expected of the new, nothing was overlooked! With its multitude of balconies and French doors, walls of glass and exquisite detail including solid eight panel doors, antique prairie stone and terracotta floors, and custom wrought iron railings that bring the outdoors in, this finely crafted house must be seen to be truly appreciated. Enter through the gate and see the tennis court to your left surrounded by the garages. The courtyard ahead has a stunning pergola, a freeform pool which uses natural boulders as landscape, and a Koi pond. Once inside there is room for everything including a glorious living room and overlook, a formal dining room, a fabulous kitchen with a serene breakfast area, a wine tasting cave, a state-of-the-art media room and a billiard room. A three story master suite includes a sitting room, a bedroom, two dressing rooms, a fabulous bathroom, an exercise room, a "smoking" room, a true library, a relaxation/reading room and an office. There is a children's wing with three bedrooms and two full baths which are all off a central family room. A guest or nanny's suite, a full bath for the pool, a mudroom, a laundry room, and a "dog" room with its own shower complete the picture. It all rests on 4.284 wooded acres and is adjacent to a protected houlder field.

WHAT DID ONE OF THE NEARLY 90 PEOPLE WHO CAME TO OUR RECENT MARKET SEMINARS HAVE TO SAY?

"As a neighboring business to Weichert, I stopped in to see what is happening with Princeton real estate. Mr. Wilton impressed me with powerful information gathered from his weekly analyses of all MLS sales and new listings. I've never seen an agency provide research of that quality and have such an understanding of the market. When I do decide to sell any of my New Jersey properties, that kind of analysis will help me best price my real estate and quickly convert my earnings into another useful investment."

In Constitution Hill

The lovely grounds of one of Princeton Township's most sought-after enclaves are trimmed and pruned in anticipation of spring's blooms, including those of a glorious magnolia tree beside the bluestone patio of this free-standing brick residence. Inside, polished slate covers the foyer floor and a closet-lined hallway leading to the open living and dining room with a fireplace, a vaulted ceiling and wall of sliding glass doors opening to a patio. The adjoining eat-in kitchen offers double stainless steel wall ovens and the laundry closet. Nearby is a powder room. The master suite on the main level also has sliding glass doors to the patio and a private bath equipped with a convenient walk-in tub. Upstairs, a second full bath serves a spacious skylit bedroom and library loft overlooking the living room. Swimming and tennis are on-site and the attractions of Nassau Street are just blocks away.

An Airy Elegance Throughout

French doors, transom-topped windows and richly finished hardwood floors give this gracious house, surrounded by luxuriant plantings, an enchanting luminosity. Wainscoting lines the walls of the soaring entry and extends into the dining room. Bay windows impart traditional elegance here and in the step-down living room. The large family room has a marble-encased fireplace and view of the heated pool. The skylit, eat-in kitchen equipped with high-end appliances looks out to a lawn with tall shade trees and an open field beyond. A walk-in pantry and mudroom adjoin. Opposite the powder room is a door to the comfortably finished basement. The second story offers two lovely bedrooms, a bedroom/office with attached sewing room with laundry, a large hall bath and the master bedroom suite with bath with private balcony. Two more dormered bedrooms share a hall bath on the third floor. Sited on a serene lot in a distinguished Hopewell Township enclave.

This One's Extra Special

The stately Georgian residences of Princeton Township's Governors Lane are always highly sought-after, but this one literally stands apart. Erected for the development's original builder, this free-standing, brick house sits on the crest of the hill. At the back, two private bluestone terraces face an expanse of woodland border. The front-to-back living room has a marble fireplace and the dining room is dressed with a bay and detailed wood trim. The kitchen, with new professional-grade appliances, opens to the Great Room featuring a beamed ceiling, fireplace and French doors framing specimen plantings. A billiards room downstairs is outfitted with a wet bar and nearby half bath. The second floor encompasses two bedroom suites, laundry closet, a refreshment bar and a luxurious tub. Four sizable bedrooms are served by a third full bath on the top floor. A separate office above the garage.

Living history.

59 • TOWN TOPICS, PRINCETON, N.J., WEDNESDAY, APRIL 2, 2008

Make new history on a very historic street.

Dedicated custom design and diligent craftsmanship achieved the timeless graciousness of the Colonial Revival for this recently constructed house in Princeton Boro's western section; its floor plan a serene progression from the architectural attributes of its classic origins to the inclusion of today's expectations and conveniences. The antique brick façade and recessed front door, with handcrafted leaded glass side and fan lights, are the perfect introduction to its interior. The center hall, with beautiful staircase, presents the formal rooms detailed with red oak floors, triple crown molding and deep baseboards. The living room has a fireplace with antique mantel and pocket doors to the formal dining room. A library opens to the compartmentalized hall bath and formal hall closet. In the spacious family room, handsome built-in cabinetry and two sets of French doors to a bluestone patio. A well-planned, bright kitchen features granite counters and a center island and is open to a breakfast area and the family room. Adjacent to the breakfast area, a side vestibule leads to the driveway and heated three car oversized garage. On the second floor, the master bedroom has a light-filled bath with heated floor and a large windowed dressing area. There are four additional bedrooms sharing two baths, and a laundry. A second staircase leads to the third floor, with potential for two bedrooms and a bath. The basement, with a second laundry, presents possibilities for finished recreation and exercise areas. Luxuriant landscaping and superb presentation bring their own elegant distinction to the prestigious tree-canopied neighborhood, just a few blocks from the heart of town.
